BERLIN IS ANXIOUS AS TO RESULTS

GERMAN GOVERNMENT ADMITS ROUMANIA IS ON VERGE OF WAR BUT THINKS IT WILL REMAIN NEUTRAL.

BULGARS CLAIM GAINS

Fighting on the Various Fronts Shows Varying Results for the Central Powers, According to Reports Issued.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Berlin, via London, Aug. 24.—Government circles here, though not too optimistic, views the Roumanian situation calmly.

The feeling is that the central powers have done everything possible to meet Roumania's views and that Roumania is persistent in the course desired by the entente, and her expansion will find the central powers ready, in which event it is to be expected every effort will be made to insure the new war theatre is on Roumanian soil.

Information from Vienna indicates the Austro-Hungarian government, bearing in mind the results of the negotiations concerning Italy's claims before that nation entered the war, has been at no time disposed to offer Roumania similar concessions for fear this again would be mistaken for a sign of weakness.

At this moment there is not discernible the slightest effort to persuade Roumania taking any other course than one due to her own initiative. The latest dispatch from Bucharest indicates a further cooling off of the war fever.

Bulgars Victors.

Berlin, Aug. 24.—The Bulgarian attack is proceeding against Serbian positions near Lake Ostrovo on the Macedonian front. The war office of today says the Bulgarians defeated Serbian counter attacks.

Defeat of the entente forces along the Struma river on the Macedonia front in northeastern Greece was announced by the Bulgarian war office in a statement issued yesterday at Sofia.

Left the Field.

The statement says the entente forces took to flight, leaving the ground covered with dead and up to the time the statement was issued the bodies of more than 400 dead had been counted. Large quantities of ammunition and supplies, including eight machine guns, were captured by the Bulgarians.

The Struma river follows an irregular course through northeastern Greece, cutting across open country along the northern shore of the Aegean Sea. Bulgarian forces appeared in this region last week and took up defensive positions along the river. They met with no opposition from the entente forces, as this region is some distance east of the old battle line.

French Report.

Paris, Aug. 24.—After an intense bombardment of the Fricourt woods, the Germans attacked with grenades the French position south of the Somme last night, but without avail, says today's official statement.

Claim Turk Victory.

In Carpathians.

Berlin, Aug. 24.—Sharp fighting continues in the Carpathian regions, where Austrian and German troops are disputing Russian attempts to advance through passes in Hungary. The Vienna headquarters reports of Aug. 23, announces that north of Cabin the Germans took Russian positions and captured two hundred prisoners. Further attacks by Russians in the Jablonitza pass region, near Zabie, were repulsed.

Russian Report.

Petrograd, Aug. 24.—Teutonic forces have begun determined attacks against the Russians who recently forced their way across the west bank of the Stokhod, in the vicinity of Rudka-Cherusnche, northeast of Kovel.

According to today's official statement, the attack columns which opened their offensive yesterday near Tobol were repulsed.

Report Revolt.

Berlin, Aug. 24.—Reports received through Stockholm indicate the situation in Turkestan is growing worse, says an Overseas News Agency statement today. General Kuropatkin recently appointed governor general of Turkestan, has been compelled to issue severe orders to cope with the conditions, the advices declare.

On Somme Front.

London, Aug. 24.—On the Somme front in the neighborhood of Guillemont the Germans last night launched a strong attack in an effort to regain lost ground. The official statement issued here today, says the attack was repulsed after a severe struggle in which the Germans sustained heavy losses.

Greeks Active.

Athens, Aug. 24.—Greek troops are resisting the Bulgarians at Seres in northeastern Greece, notwithstanding the orders of the general staff that they retire. The Greeks are being reinforced rapidly by volunteers.

WORLD'S GREATEST BATTLE HAS WAGED FIERCELY FOR 2 MONTHS

The battle of the Somme, the greatest battle in all history, will soon be in its third month. On July 1 the British and French troops in western France commenced their attack upon the strongly fortified German trench lines on the twenty-five mile front north and south of the River Somme. The immediate objective of the French on the southern half of the battle line is the town of Peronne. The British objective is Bapaume. The allies report slow but steady progress.

NAVAL WAR GAME ON ATLANTIC IS FAST ADVANCING

Enemy is Landing Invading Army Says Commander of Defending Fleet in Naval War Game.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, Aug. 24.—The fleet of enemy transports bringing an invading army to be landed on the Atlantic seaboard, has been found by the defending fleet and the first point in the big naval war game goes to the defending forces. Early today the big wireless towers at Arglinton took up orders being sent from Rear Admiral Helm's flagship, dispersing his line to meet the "enemy."

No word has come of the whereabouts of the hostile battle-fleet commanded by Admiral Mayo, but it is supposed to be near the transports.

Admiral Helm is sweeping the ocean toward the last known position of the enemy, with a line of scouts covering several hundred miles. They are steaming on paralleled courses on intervals of thirty miles.

Rainy or misty weather may permit the enemy to slip through the thirty-mile intervals. For that reason an inenr line of scouts is being maintained and close into the coast behind the defending battle fleet, the submarine flotilla is ready, should the enemy evade the outer line.

Early today, the navy intelligent office discovered a "plot" to blow up the storage oil tanks at Narragansett, and to destroy the magazines in the naval shore station. All commanders were warned and ordered to report what steps they had taken to thwart the attempted attack.

Patrol Boat Takes Fishing Vessels From Iceland Waters into Port—Thought Move on Germany.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

London, Aug. 24.—Inquiries are being made to the British government by Robert Skinner, the American consul general, as to the cause of the seizure of two American fishing schooners, which were fishing off the coast of Iceland, and were taken into Lerwick, Shetland islands, by a British patrol boat.

No reply to the inquiries has as yet been received, but in the meantime the belief is expressed that the schooners are victims of the general policy which Great Britain is apparently adopting toward all neutral fishermen in an effort to induce them to sell their catches to the British, rather than to dispose of them in quarters through which they might reach Germany.

DETAILS EXPLAINED IN CHICAGO TRIAL

John Sommer, Chicago Jeweler, Gives Interesting Facts in Morrison Case Today.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Chicago, Aug. 24.—Details as to how he spent $200,000 belonging to Edward Morrison in "entertaining the aged millionaire," were given today by John Sommers, jeweler, and a long time friend of Morrison, at the resumption of the federal court investigation of the old man's intricate financial dealing.

Sommers said he had spent large amounts to pay liquor bills contracted by Morrison, and that other large amounts had been expended for a questionable form of entertainment.

"I was forced to remain away from home three or four days at a time, when I went out with Morrison," Sommer told the court.

The two Burnstein girls, Anna and Alice, recently adopted by Morrison, and who the reputed father, Joseph Burnstein, a junk dealer, testified yesterday were daughters of Morrison, were expected to be called to the stand later.

The women, "rookies" were busy making bandages and knitted surgical dressings. Later in the day the women studied war maps of Mexico.

MAY ACCEPT PROPOSITION NOW GIVEN

RAILROAD HEADS ASK SAFEGUARD OF THEIR INTERESTS BE MADE BEFORE THEY ACCEPT EIGHT-HOUR DAY.

RAISE FREIGHT RATES?

Also Want to Have Commission Organized on Much the Same Lines as in Canada to Prevent Future Labor Troubles.

Washington, Aug. 24.—After conferences with representatives of the employes and employers, Commissioner Chamberlain of the federal mediation corps discussed the strike situation with President Wilson and made arrangements for group railroad presidents to see Mr. Wilson immediately. There were reports that a settlement of the controversy was in sight.

Hale Holden of the Burlington, Daniel Willard of the Baltimore & Ohio and R. F. Lovett of the Union Pacific and the sub-committee which has been dealing with the president for the last few days, arrived at the White House shortly before one o'clock and refused to make any statement before seeing the president.

After the conference, it was said the outlook was more hopeful.

The president sent for the executives to acquaint them with the progress being made by him in dealing with problems suggested at previous conferences.

After continued conference between President Wilson and the committee of railroad executives, the situation surrounding the sudden strike was described as having narrowed down to the following:

The railroad presidents, at least the select committee of eight, are willing to accept the eight hour day insisted upon by President Wilson and the trainmen.

In return they ask that they be assured as fuly as possible that all proper support be given, and proper means be used to assure them a freight rate increase from the interstate commerce commission.

The ask also that congress create a permanent board or commission similar to the Canadian commission, to handle future labor difficulties.

A commission of this character would be empowered to investigate when labor troubles threatened, and no strike could be called or strike votes taken pending investigation, a full report of which would be made public at its conclusion.

At the end of the investigation arbitration would be suggested, but if not accepted, opportunity would be given to the men to take a strike vote. Balloting would be secret.

These proposals were communicated by Commissioner Chambers to the representatives of the men, who apparently regard them favorably.

President Wilson is understood to feel some sympathy for counter demands of railroads and is not averse to having the men accept them. It is expected, however, that a vote of 640 labor representatives here must be taken before they can reive the necessary endorsement.

In the meantime, the executives will continue their conferences among themselves, and another White House visit may be made later.

ENGLISH "INTERN" MUCH MAIL MATTER MEANT FOR GERMANY

Censor Has Greatest Museum Collection in World, Iron Crosses, Hams, Shoes, Etc.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

London, Aug. 24.—The most interesting museum in London is not open to the general public. It is the museum of the censor and contains a collection of most curious exhibits which represent attempts that have been made to evade the British naval blockade since the outbreak of the war.

Most of these exhibits come from the United States where thousands of people of German extraction have despatched all sorts of useful things to friends and relatives in the Fatherland. Many of the exhibits indicate the pains and ingenuity of the senders; in some instances they made a pound of lard look like a copy of the morning paper or a packet of pure rubber like a bundle of narcissus bulbs.

A side of bacon weighing forty pounds is mute evidence of the attempt made by a St. Louis man to assauge the hunger of some friends or relatives in what was undoubtedly his former home town. In his anxiety to get the bacon to Germany this man sent it by first class mail and attached stamps to the bacon itself to the value of nearly $5.00.

There are many other instances in which the stamps on the packages by far exceed the value of the contents. Many parcels have duplicate covers. They are addresesd to someone in a neutral country, whose business it is to pull off one cover and repost them to the German or Austrian address revealed below.

An enterprising Buffalo man sent a large number of letters each containing a sheet of pure rubber. Rubber has been a scarce comomdity in Germany for more than a year and efforts have repeatedly been made to get through the blockade all sorts of these articles. Once in Germany the rubber would have been sent to a central depot where it ultimately would have emerged as rubber tires.

This censor's museum contains huge bundles of newspapers or what appeared at first glance to be newspaers. Closer inspetcion reveals that the neatly rolled ends are but cleverly made plugs of paper and wood. When one of these plugs is pulled out there is uncovered a long sausage-shaped bag of calico containing anything from sliced ham to Para rubber, from rice to tobacco.

Two iron crosses are not the least interesting of the exhibits. They are the original article and were being sent from Germany to a child in the United States. The consignor was maker of the crosses, the head of the firm that supplies them to the German government, and in an accompanying letter he suggests that the recipients wear them.

Shoes are the most numerous of the exhibits and most of these come from th United States.

In several cases they are wrapped carefully in a piece of best sole leather.

All these things, neatly laid out and ticketed, are merely samples of large contraband cargoes that have found their way into the hands of the British authorities. They are not confiscated but will some day get to their proper destinatins, only at present the British government has "interned" them.

BREMEN HAS SAILED

German Merchant Vessel Interned In Boston Harbor Leaves for New London This Morning—Mystery in New Move.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

London, Aug. 24.—The Deutschland returned home slightly damaged, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from The Hague which says this information is contained in a telegram from Bremen. The members of the crew were unwilling, it adds, to give details of the return voyage. The arrival of the submarine surprised her owners, as she was not expected to dock within a week.

Voyage a Success.

Later reports of the return of the German submarine Deutschland from the United States are corroborated in a telegram received at Amsterdam from Bremen and forwarded by Reuter's correspondent. According to this information, the Deutschland traveled 4,200 miles on her homeward voyage. At the beginning the sea was tempestuous, but later it become more calm. The Leutschland proved to be able to navigate the stormy seas excellently. Her engines worked constantly. No icebergs were passed on the journey.

Praise U. S.

The American government, says the dispatch, acted in a correct manner as a neutral, rigorously enforcing respect for its frontier from British and French warships by employment of its own men-of-war. After a British cruiser entered Chesapeake Bay at night, even more effective measures were taken to enforce neutrality.

No less than eight British warships, it is said, were on the alert, surrounded by numerous small American vessels which had been chartered for the purpose of placing nets and obtaining information as to the movements of the Deutschland. Nevertheless, the submarine succeeded in leaving undetected, a distance of 100 miles being traversed under water without difficulty.

Bremen Sails.

The departure for America a week ago of the German submarine Bremen is reported in a dispatch from Bremen as forwarded from The Hague by the Exchange Telegraph company. It is said the owners of the Deutschland and the Bremen received word seven days ago of the progress being made by the Deutschland on her return voyage and it was not until they had obtained this information that they permitted the Bremen to depart.

The Deutschland took the same route on both her voyages, the dispatch said, returning to Germany by the North Sea. Captain Paul Koenig of the Deutschland is being feted as a national hero, and has been summoned to Emperor William's headquarters to report on his voyage.

Comments on U. S. Protection.

Berlin, Aug. 24.—The Vossische Zeitung publishes an interview with Captain Paul Koenig of the submarine merchantman Deutschland, who expresses appreciation of the attitude of the United States government in taking every necessary measure to prevent violation of neutrality in connection with the departure of the submarine.

Return Pleases Kaiser.

Amsterdam, Aug. 24.—According to a dispatch from Berlin received today, Emperor William sent the following telegram to owners of the submarine Deutschland:

"With sincere pleasure I have just received news of the safe return of the submarine Deutschland. I heartily congratulate the owners and builders of the vessel, and the brave seamen under Koenig's command."

The message also expresses the intention of the emperor to bestow decorations on members of the Deutschland's personnel.

Line Left Boston.

Bosten, Aug. 24.—The North German Lloyd liner Willehad, which had been in refuge here since the outbreak of the war, slipped out of the harbor early today, presumably for New London, Conn., for which ports she obtained clearance papers last night. Officials of the line asserted the change was made to reduce docking charges and denied the report that there was any connection between the Willehad movement and the expected arrival of the German merchant submarine Bremen.

The Willehad went out under the flag of the German merchant marine, the first time it had been carried out of Boston harbor since the war began. She was without consort. Her crew, a full complement in command of Captain Jachens, has been augmented by additions from the several other ships of the line here.

Left Early.

The Willehad departed in the early hours as cheers surang out from the decks of other refugee vessels. Captain J. J. Hartling, the pilot, who took the steamer out of the harbor, said she was bound for New London and would make the passage through the Cape Cod canal. Those aboard, he said, acted as if they were on a routine trip and professed to know of no special service to be rendered at her destination.

The Willehad, a cargo steamer of 4,761 tons, was the smallest of the refugee ships at this port.

JEFFRIS-PHILIPP MEET FIRST TIME IN BIG CAMPAIGN

Candidates For Senator and Governor Speak From Same Platform Yesterday—Not to Meet Again.

La Crosse, Wis., August 24.—For the only time in this primary election campaign M. G. Jeffris of Janesville and Governor Emanuel L. Philipp appeared on the same platform yesterday. Their speaking engagements in the past have not been at the same point and they will not meet again during the campaign.

Mr. Jeffris was with the governor at both the Galesville fair and for the evening speech here Friday night. The Governor was exceptionally well received at both Galesville and La Crosse and not only were his addresses liberally applauded but he was given strong assurance of support by voters who talked with him previous to his meetings in both places.

The governor in his Galesville speech laid particular stress on what the agricultural board was accomplishing for the state and the value it would be to the agricultural interest of the state.

He also talked at Galesville of the fight he had before the legislature to secure the reduction in the appropriation which he accomplished. Farmers came from far and wide to hear the governor at the Galesville fair and the audience which greeted him there was one of the largest which has ever been collected on the Galesville fair grounds.

The audience which greeted Governor Philipp at La Crosse in the evening, filled the park in which he spoke and was the largest audience which any political speaker has had in La Crosse this year.

The governor spoke for about two hours at La Crosse and gave the same careful review of the work of his administration that he has given elsewhere. The governor was particularly emphatic at La Crosse in his declarations in regard to the way the La Follette people in the last legislature had fought his effors to reduce the state appropriations and of the great fight which he had been obliged to make to secure the reductions that were obtained. He said to obtain the information which had enabled him to make the reduction in the appropriations had cost him a sum of $3,000 and that this money had been paid out of his own pocket. The governor was frequently applauded during his La Crosse address.

PARTIES DO DAMAGE AT GRAVEL COMPANY

Gas Engine Tipped Over and Articles Stolen at Maxfield Sand and Gravel Pits Sunday.

Evidently some one has the habit of going out on an annual thieving party for some time Sunday parties visited the Alva Maxfield farm where a sand pit is located and did considerable damage to the excavating machinery. They tipped over the gasoline engine used on the loading excavator, stole the batteries and took a large quantity of hard oil. The damage done amounts to about twenty-five dollars. Just a year ago the same thing was done and after the damage Sunday the owners have set out to get the culprits. A liberal reward will be offered to those giving information leading to the arrest of those implicated. The police are working on the case.

From appearances there must have been three or four good sied men in the party for the engine is a large one and it would take at least three persons to tip it over. Tracks can still be seen where they went to the pit in an auto. A gate was opened and with ther car they drove through a large field of corn.

PHILIPP PROCLAIMS SEPT. 4 LABOR DAY

Governor Today Issues Proclamation Formally Setting Date for Holiday Devoted to Workers.

The people of the United States, more than any other country in the world, have come to recognize the consideration due to labor. In this country, as in no other, the man or woman who toils is respected above all others. Whether he or she may be one of those master minds which plan and direct the work of this nation, or one of those who carry out those plans, the worker has the respect and good will of all thinking people. In this country the worker, no matter how humble may be his origin, may rise to the highest place in the land. By his industry he is known rather than by his caste or class, and for this reason this nation has prospered and grown great.

It has become the custom to set aside one day in each year in honor of labor, when all work shall cease, and those who toil may spend this brief period in rest and recreation, well earned by the application of each to his allotted task during the year just closed. It is a day when we should thoughtfully consider the advantages of the government under which we live, and counsel, one with another, upon those things which we can do to make that government better.

Wisconsin always has recognized this day, and her people have responded to its obligations and have recognized its importance as a state as well as a national holiday. Therefore, as governor of the state of Wisconsin, I, Emanuel L. Philipp, do hereby designate Monday, the fourth day of September, 1916, as Labor day, and I recommend that on that day all work be suspended as far as possible, and that our citizens join with those who celebrate, to the end that the significance of the day may be brought home to our people, and that labor be accorded its just place in the thoughts of the citizens of Wisconsin.

Emanuel L. Philipp, Governor.

SEARCH FOR SUSPECT IN KIDNAPPING CASE

Local Police Being Aided By Department of Another City In Attempt to Solve Hoefler Assault.

Chief of Police Champion and members of the department are anxiously awaiting letters in answer to those sent out by the chief relative to the husband of the woman who appeared at the station Monday morning and expressed the belief that she and not Helen Hoefler was to be the victim of the kidnapping. Developments in the case have reached such a stage where the police have cause to place more and more faith in the story told by this woman.

It has been established without a doubt that the estranged husband was in the city a week previous to Saturday evening when the Hoefler girl was felled by a blow on Wisconsin street and taken to near the state school for the blind, close to two miles away.

Miss Hoefler is still confined to the home of her parents, John H. Hoefler, 411 Fifth avenue. The strain and excitement of her trying experience is slowly going away and it will not be long before she will be able to be about again.

MILKMEN ORGANIZE LOCAL ASSOCIATION

Propose to Eliminate Long Hauls So Will Have Station in Janesville. Not to Affect Prices.

An enthusiastic meeting of milk producers living in the vicinity of Janesville, was held last evening at the office of John L. Fisher in Central Block, some fifty or sixty farmers being present. After a preliminary meeting given over to the discussion of the milk business and the local market for milk, a permanent organization to be known as The Milk Producers' Association was effected. Nearly all present signed the roll as charter members and the following officers were elected: President, W. O. Austin; vice president, H. C. Hemingway; secretary, George Woodruff; treasurer, W. C. Huguniu; board of directors, M. J. Clark, J. M. Huguniu, Chas. E. Johnson, John L. Fisher and Arthur Wiggin. The superintendent and the field manager of the Footville condensory attended the meeting by invitation and submitted a proposition for establishing a receiving depot in Janesville. The meeting adjourned until Wednesday evening, Sept. 6th, by which time a large number of names will be added to the roll of members.

The organization has not been made for the purpose of increasing milk prices locally. Rather, it is meant for the establishment here of a depot which will be a clearing house for the huge quantities of milk which farmers, living in some instances within a mile if the city limits, find necessary to haul daily as far as ten and twelve miles to markets or creameries.

FAREWELL MEETING GIVEN TO ROBINSON

Boy Scouts Assemble for Last Meeting Under Scout Master Robinson.

Last night the Boy Scouts of Janesville assembled at the headquarters of Troop 1 for a farewell meeting to Scout Master Robinson, who leaves the city Thursday. The meeting was attended by about forty-five boys of Troops 1, 2 and 3.

After the regular routine of business a number of short talks were given by visitors, men interested in the scout movement and friends of Dr. Robinson. The various troop committeemen spoke of the progress in organization, growth in size, and the great increase in activities that has taken place since the launching of the scout movement last October by Dr. Robinson. A number of the older scouts who have been with the movement since its inauguration told of their experiences in the scout work and what it meant to them.

Scout Master Robinson concluded the talks with an expression of his love for the boys individually and of his high regard for the whole movement. He spoke of his deep regret at leaving the many friends he had made among the boys but declared that he felt the movement would never enjoy anything but the best of success under the leadership of the men who have interested themselves in the scout work.

A most forcible symbol of the appreciation the boys have for Dr. Robinson's work was the tendering of a sealed envelope containing a sum of money collected among the boys of the various troops, to the departing scout leader.

The evening was closed with a great feast of watermelon, to which everyone present did full justice. One of the boys was heard to remark as he left the meeting that it was the first time in his life that he had ever had enough watermelon.

Dr. Robinson's departure is a matter of deep regret to all those who are acquainted with his earnest and untiring work for the scouts. His many friends join in wishing him all possible success and happiness in his future work.

Divided Knowledge.

During President Lincoln's first visit to the Springfield penitentiary an old inmate looking out through the bars remarked: "Well, Mr. Lincoln, you and I ought to be well posted on prisons. We've seen all there are in the country." "Why, this is the first one I ever visited," replied the chief executive, somewhat astonished. "Yes," was the reply, "but I've been in all the rest."

SOCIAL CENTER FARM CONFERENCE SUNDAY; REV. JONES SPEAKS

Head of Chicago Lincoln Center Movement, Former Janesville Pastor, At Milton Annex.

Final arrangements for the Clear Lake conference have been effected. The committee in charge again extends a hearty welcome to all people in this part of the county. The conference will be held in the open at two o'clock next Sunday afternoon, August 27, but all those who wish to come earlier are urged to do so. The grounds of the Lincoln Center camp on Clear lake where the conference is to be held furnish a large number of attractive picnic places, and ample provision for parking automobiles and hitching horses can be found.

The topic of Sunday's conference will be. "The Unity of Civilization." "That means," said a close acquaintance of the Rev. Jones, "to what do all the evidences of increasing civilization point? We are all of us more or less acquainted with the immediate facts of our daily life, and even with the great events that bring about such radical changes in the life and governments of the whole world. But how few of us are familiar with the significance of any or all of these facts when considered as isolated phenomena. What is the immediate effect of some incident upon the spirit of the times, upon our development of civilization? To put you abreast with the very best in our day; to make you see your duty in recognizing the vital in the midst of the inconsequential, this is the object of the conference."

The program is made up of speakers from many towns, each well qualified to present the findings of his particular investigations. To unify all these remarks Dr. Jenkin Lloyd Jones of Chicago will conclude the meeting with a plea for permanent disarmament and lasting peace. Dr. Lloyd Jones was on the Ford peace trip and is a pacifist of international repute. The oportunity of hearing such a man to say nothing of the rest of the most excellent program should be sufficient incentive to bring everyone to the conference. Many old friends and former members of Dr. Jones' parish here in Janesville will attend the meeting to renew friendships with the old Unitarian pastor who was here for so long.

SWISS EMBROIDERY NOT IN MUCH DEMAND IN UNITED STATES NOW

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]

Berne, Switzerland, Aug. 24.—That the Swiss embroidery trade is more and more losing its American market appears from recently published figures While in 1907 the value of Swiss embroidery exported to the United States was 76,000,000 francs, it fell to 30,000,000 in 1914 and to 26,000,000 in 1915. The decrease is attributed to increased American production.

AUSTRIAN BRAIN BUGS "SOUNDING" HEAD BUMPS OF PRISONERS OF WAR

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]

Vienna, Aug. 24.—The number and variety of prisoners of war in the Austrian camps have presented an almost unprecedented opportunity to the students of anthropology. One of the most ardent investigators, Prof. Poech of the Academy of Sciences, already has a collection of 148 plaster casts of heads of polygot prisoners of war. Among the Russian prisoners alone there have been found fourteen or more distinct races of widely divergent type.

THE SAFE TICKET.

You voters who are in doubt as to whom you should cast your next ballot on primary day for, should not neglect the opportunity given you of choosing men whose interests are your own. Men who have been tried and not found wanting. Men whose brand of republicanism is untainted by any "bar sinister."

Headed by Malcolm G. Jeffris, candidate for the United States senate, you can make no mistake in voting. Truly American and truly republican, Jeffris stands for the principles of the party that has given this country the best government it has ever known. For instance, Emanuel L. Philipp is head and shoulders above any of his competitors. He stands the abuse of his detractors and his record as two years the state's chief executive should assure his renomination.

Associated with Mr. Philipp on his state ticket you will find such men as Hicks of Oshkosh, capable and well able to handle the office of attorney general, which he has held before. Johnson, present state treasurer, who refused the empty promises and "blarney" of the ultra progressives, to stand by a man when he saw one in office. Marshall Cousins of Eau Claire, now serving his state and nation at the Mexican border, as major in the National Guard, candidate for lieutenant governor. George Harrington of Elkhorn, the farmer candidate for secretary of state, a man who is thoroughly conversant with state affairs, particularly taxation, and who would make a most excellent official.

In our own state senatorial and assembly districts we have L. E. Cunningham of Beloit, who has served one term with honor and credit and whose candidacy is opposed by a coterie of tax-eaters and disappointed office-seekers. L. C. Whittet of Edgerton in the first Rock county district, whose worth is known and appreciated, and Albert Winnegar of Beloit, in the second assembly district, whose opponent was repudiated two years ago when he sought renomination, and again this spring when he sought to be a delegate to the national republican convention.

These are all men you can tie to, so vote for these men when primary day comes and you will make no mistake. They are all men working in your interests for a safe, sane and economical administration of national and state affairs.

MONEY IN POLITICS.

Reference was made the other day to the demands for money made on political candidates. The man with the traditional "bar'l" is esteemed a prize in all parties. He constitutes an abuse, but he is exceedingly useful.

It is not merely that the wealthy candidate's money is so very helpful. He has leisure that can be given to party work. If he earned his money himself, he has business ability and brains. These qualities are none too common in politics.

The best asset for party success is a ticket of candidates of sound, practical judgment, broad intelligence, the knowledge of human nature. Where the leadership is placed in the hands of such, money comes in easily. The campaign is conducted on a high plane, it appeals to intelligent and liberal-minded citizens. The chances of success are multiplied. Candidates that can place their campaigns on this basis are the most profitable political assets, even if they can't contribute a dollar to the war chest.

Political committees, however, are apt to judge a candidate by his ability to "loosen up." Even if he is a poor man, they assume he should be willing to contribute his first year's salary. If he loses, they feel the honors of the position should compensate.

This tendency to "fry the fat" and put on the pecuniary screws, frightens out of the political game, men who are needed there. They have a taste for politics, ability for public speech, tact in handling men, and a sensitive feeling of the public pulse. But they do not propose to be bled by the leeches and camp followers of the party headquarters. Too often leadership goes to money without brains. This is a combination that does not appeal to the voters.

SOUTHERN DIPLOMACY.

It is altogether fitting that the defense of the Wilson administration in the lower house of congress should be undertaken by a representative from Mississippi—a state which is democratic mainly because of statutes which do not permit the colored republicans to vote or to have their votes counted. Moreover, it is the South which has furnished the votes in congress to pass the measures which Wilson has advocated and it is the South which has provided the chairmen for the committees who have framed these measures and who have drafted the "gag rules" under which the bills have been passed. Hence it is the obvious thing for the South—which, in addition, has been the chief beneficiary of the Wilson regime—to come to Wilson's defense.

VITAL PRINCIPLES.

Not even the most biased reader can fail to realize that President Wilson has surrendered one of the most vital principles—that of arbitration—by his decision that the railroads must grant the eight hour day, whether it is right or not, regardless of arbitration. It is the decision of a one track mind and not of a man with brains that should go to make up the proper calibre of a head of a great government like ours. In fact, this single track mind decides the case arbitrarily and without trial. Whether he is right or wrong is pure guess work. It is theoretical government and one which is dangerous. The question of arbitration is essential, but not the kind of arbitration that President Wilson advocates.

UNGRATEFUL POSITIONS.

There is too much criticism of men in public office, particularly in a small community. Be it in the work of a special committee, seeking to benefit the public interests, members, voluntary of some organizations aspiring to further the interests of the city or in elective offices. The man who takes no real part in civic matters is the first to criticise and the loudest to denounce this or that person for some fault they interpret far different from what it was intended. Charity begins at home but the committeeman, the public official, has the most ungrateful position of any man in the broad universe in a small city or town.

MERE SUGGESTION.

Just a suggestion. The school year is soon to start. You parents with students in the schools, why not make it your personal business to see what conditions surround your children? Become acquainted with their teachers, what work is required of them, how they are progressing, and show something more than a passing interest in their mental welfare. Look to the sanitary conditions that surround them and then you will understand them later when the time comes for them to leave their schools and go into the world.

The circus safely took away from Janesville some fourteen thousand dollars, that will never return, even if it did not parade. As one circus official stated openly, "This is the biggest day's business since the Fourth of July." They saved money by not parading. The loss of two hundred of their best employes, within a limited space of time, made them short-handed and they appreciated the opportunity of accepting an excuse for not giving a street display that costs them hundreds of dollars every time it is held.

The war chest and its use is aptly illustrated just at present when the ultra progressives turned down as their candidate for the gubernatorial honors a man who has consistently opposed Philipp and selected "Millionaire" Hatton. Another kind of a war chest is the use by a public official of his mailing frank to forward campaign literature to voters without any cost except to the voters themselves—only they do not know it—as the senior Wisconsin senator is doing at present.

All the tricks of the expert politician are being used in Beloit to turn the tide of honest and sincere voters from Albert Winnegar's campaign for renomination to the assembly, to his opponent. However, if the voters will investigate carefully the record of the two candidates Winnegar will be renominated.

Wilson may keep the northern guardsmen in Texas until after the election and John Sharp Williams may prevent them from casting their votes down there in camp. But nothing can prevent them from writing letters home—and their relatives cannot be kept away from the polls.

Having delayed thus long about it, why not put the Wilson notification meeting over to November 8 and then tell him all at once that he has been renominated and defeated?

One would expect the soldier boys on the Mexican border might resent the fact that they are being kept down there for political effect, and they do.

A RED HOT DAY

(Contributed.)

'Tis the end of a red-hot day, dear,
The end of a red-hot day.
I'm filled with dread, and filled with fear
That tomorrow another may appear,
Or that yet some more are hovering near,
At the end of a red-hot day.
Oh, the sizzling heat,
Oh, the sizzling heat, and blistering feet
That attend me on my way,
And cling to me into the eventide,
At the end of a red-hot day.
There's one thing I always can hear, dear,
And that is the "skeeters'" lay;
I'm disfigured with bumps from their kisses sweet,
And what is my poison seems their meat.
Oh, I'm tired of this infernal heat
At the end of a red-hot day.
Oh, the scorching heat,
And the rays that beat,
Forever and for aye.
I would they might cease
For I'm nothing but grease
At the end of a red-hot day.
So lay me away 'neath the willow tree,
Where the little wormlets play.
Spill tears of joy upon my grave
And say—With look and smile most brave—
He will never again at the weather rave,
At the end of a red-hot day.

THE ROOF MYSTERY.

In the theatre every night.

I.

Henry Hallroom crept out of his bedroom and closed the door stealthily behind him. Then after looking cautiously up and down the hall, he stole noiselessly up to the attic and clambered out the window on to the window on to the roof. Carefully he groped his way along the steep tin incline.

"If it could only be done at night, I wouldn't be so afraid of being detected," he thought, as he lay flat on his back. "But no, I either have to do it at glaring midday or not at all."

The next day Henry Hallroom crept out of his bedroom, etc.—see Chapter 1.

Henry Hallroom was striding along Jones boulevard, jauntily swinging his sisselwood cane.

"Why, Hen!" exclaimed each passing acquaintance. "I didn't know you have been away! Where'd you get that swagger tan!"

On the Spur of the Moment

ROY K. MOULTON

Enough—That's All.

I do not pine for millions—
A Croseus to be—
A haughty king of finance,
Like gold-crazed old John D.
I simply want of riches
In weight to match my heft—
Enough to pay the coal man
And have a dollar left.

I do not long for noodles
Of stocks and bonds and such;
I scorn the blight of Mammon—
His cursed, cankering touch.
I only ask of Fortune
Enough of toadskins bright
To settle with the meat man
And leave a "plunk" in sight.

You do not hear me sobbing
For wealth in wholesale lots—
The kind that's gained by scheming,
By foxy, frenzied plots.
Count me with those that money
Of sense has not bereft.
Let me but pay the gas man
And have my wallet left.

Simple Things.

Some folks are prone to mope about, and find a little fault and pout about their walks in life; they long to do the greatest things, and soar aloft on eagles' wings, but shun life's toil and strife. They seek to conquer worlds or naught, and that is why they're never sought to help in times of need; that's why they fail to make the grade, and always linger in the shade—at last to go to seed. 'Tis better far to earn a cent, than loaf till all of life is spent in pouting and complaint. 'Tis best to do the deeds that help to make a better man of self, and hold pride in restraint. One gains much more by making wood or heaving tons of coal than lying idle half the year and living in the mortal fear one will not reach his goal. The thrifty hen that lays the egg, is not seen standing on one leg or leaning 'gainst a post; she's digging busily away from early morn till close of day, and never stops to boast. And so the man the highest up, got there because he'd share his cup with laborer or king; he didn't hesitate to do the tasks which might appear to you as just the simple things.

A Card of Thanks.

I wish to thank all those who helped me during my misfortune of losing a cow. Especially do I wish to thank Mr. Nick Koivisto, who collected $35.10, and Mrs. Hill, who collected $11.75.

I hope God will give success to all these people all through life. Mr. Nick Nanha.—Adv. in Two Harbors (Minn.) Journal-News.

The Gravel Pitters.

A Michigan exchange says:

While Mr. Frank Shindeldecker and his stalwart sons, the prominent gravel pitters, were gravel pitting the other day, they suddenly came upon a huge human skeleton, which, for they were unable to recall so much as a legend of any mysterious murder in that vicinity, and the Shindeldecker imagination is not quite up to Mound Builder standards, they reluctantly diagnosed as merely that of some famous Indian chieftain, whereupon they proceeded quietly with their gravel-pitting.

Just Buying Things.

A stranger came to see me,
He was a pleasant man,
And so I bought a phonograph
On the installment plan.
Of course, I didn't need it,
But when his terms I got,
It really seemed much cheaper
To buy the thing than not.

Another stranger reached us,
He had lawn mowers to sell,
On easy-pay installments,
And so, of course, we fell.
One more had pianolas,
And they were very cheap,
Ten cents a month or thereabuts,
And we took one, to keep.

'Twas that way, too, with wringers,
Gas ranges, fancy clocks,
And with vacuum cleaners,
Air shirts and pants and socks.
And so the thing continued;
In our installment greed,
We bought wheel chairs and crutches
And junk we did not need.

We're not gay and light-hearted,
And not inclined to brag,
As we did ere we started
On our installment jag.
We have no peace and quiet
That we enjoyed of yore,
There are nineteen collectors
Each day before our door.

DUG THROUGH FORTUNE IN GRAPHITE TO REACH POOR GOLD MINE

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]

Redding, Cal. Aug. 24.—Having dug his way through a ledge of graphite now worth a fortune, to reach a poor gold mine from which he has gotten a bare living for 14 years, A. E. Egerton of Whiskeytown has just sold his claim to H. C. Warneck of this city.

The graphite is valuable because the war has shut off importations from Germany.

When Egerton drove a tunnel into his gold mine over ten years ago, he cut a black ledge five feet in thickness. He passed up the "black stuff" as worthless and went on taking out gold, his tunnel finally penetrating the mountain 1000 feet. The black ledge, which was really graphite, was encountered ninety feet below the surface.

The name of the mine is "Aladdin's Lamp." The new owner proposes to put an auto truck line in service and ship the graphite to Redding for transportation to San Francisco by rail.

HUGHES ADVOCATES THE RESTORATION OF DUTY ON ALL SUGAR

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

New York, Aug. 24.—Hughes and Sugar:—Governor Hughes has made it perfectly clear that as President he will advocate the restoration of the duty on sugar. According to the republican view, the duty on sugar is highly important because it plays a dual part, protecting the beet sugar industry of the entire country and the cane sugar industry of Louisiana, and because it yields a tremendous revenue without imposing any material burden on the consumers. That the sugar tariff can be made to yield a large revenue has been certified to by the democrats in repealing a portion of the Underwood bill which would have put sugar completely on the free list before it could go into operation. The republican duty on sugar yielded annually $53,000,000 revenue. This duty President Wilson, against the advice of Representative Underwood and other more experienced democrats, insisted upon abolishing and congress, supine before his mandate, incorporated in the Underwood bill a provision which would have put sugar on the free list by successive steps. When, however, practically 75 per cent of the duty had been removed the deficit in the treasury loomed so large, despite the special taxes which had been imposed, that the democratic leaders decided to repeal the clause which would have abolished the last of the sugar duty and thus avoid a further loss of approximately $15,000,000, and this was done, with the help of republican votes. Mr. Hughes now indicates that one of the constructive policies of the administration will be the restoration of the duty on sugar, with, presumably, an increase of the customs revenues from this one item alone of, according to present rates of consumption, nearly $60,000,000. Some of Mr. Hughes' democratic critics have been urging him to propose a constructive policy. This is his answer to such criticism.

The Shipping Bill:—Certain of your readers have written suggesting that the criticism of the shipping bill in this correspondence was unduly harsh, that it struck them as partisan rather than just. The truth is that the severest critics of the shipping bill are democrats. The dare not openly criticise the measure because they fear the revenge of the president and more especially of his son-in-law, Secretary McAdoo, the real father of the shipping bill. In proof of this, note what the New York Times, a democratic paper which is loyally supporting Wilson, has to say. It says of the shipping bill which has gone to conference: "It is not the old bill are democrats. They dare not tile, but is still open to a multitude of objections," and again, "The shipping bill is a shadow of its original form as it approaches enactment. Meanwhile the case against it has grown stronger. If the bill were to be strengthened further by the omission of other causes of original opposition—as, for example, by the omission of the use of government money in antagonizing private enterprise—there might be acquiescence in the fragment that is left." The Times, which certainly cannot be suspected of republican partisanship in view of its loyal support of Mr. Wilson, does not say, as your correspondent has said, that the only purposes in passing what is left of the shipping bill are (1) to "save the face of the president," (2) to provide places for "deserving democrats" at $7,500 a year and expenses, and (3) to make $50,000,000 of government funds available for expenditure by the administration during the presidential campaign. The Times can hardly be expected to say that. But it does make perfectly clear that there is no good reason for passing it, that there are many valid objections to it, and it leaves to the common sense of its readers to decide what are the real reasons back of the administration's insistence on its passage.

May Mean a Saving:—That the condemnation which Governor Hughes has visited upon the administration for creating useless commissions to make places for "deserving democrats" may be productive of good even before March 4th, is indicated by the report from Washington that certain of the democratic leaders have initiated a movement to cut the salaries of all members of special commissions to $7,500. Cetrain of the democratic leaders predict the reduction of the salaries of the members of the interstate commerce and the federal trade commissions, the federal reserve board, the farm loans board and the prospective tariff commission to $7,500, in conformity with the pay of members of the proposed shipping commission. Republicans are very sceptical, however, that any such step will be taken unless President Wilson is defeated in Novenrber.

Wilson Losing Grip:—As seen from afar, President Wilson appears to be losing, to some extent at least, the grip he has had on congress. With the vast patronage at his disposal and Secretary McAdoo's reputation for never failing to get even with a politician who opposes either the president or himself, Mr. Wilson has been able to dictate absolutely to congress heretofore. But as if they foresaw his defeat in November, certain democratic senators are now leading a revolt. President Wilson, after vetoing the immigration bill, forbade its reconsideration, as he considered it politically inexpedient to agitate the subject further on the eve of the presidential election. Accordingly the democratic caucus of the senate met and voted to lay the bill aside until after the election. Now, however, ten democrats have bolted the caucus and voted to take up and repass the bill. The loyal democratic senators are still trying to carry out Mr. Wilson's orders and may prove successful, as they have authority to make generous promises of patronage to those who will recant and obey the White House, and to make dire threats of executive wrath to those who remain on the reservation.

Strikes and Safeties:—New York is still awaiting with eager interest the outcome of the railroad strike negotiations being carried on in Washington, although it is still confident that a strike will be averted. New Yorkers are generally relieved that the renewed danger of a street car strike has been dissipated by the yielding of the companies to certain demands which were supported by the mayor. But there is now another strike which has greatly increased the demand for safety razors and which threatens to make New Yorkers generally resemble William Jennings Bryan or Senator Vardaman. The New York barbers have gone on strike and only men whose wives are experts with the scissors and a bowl can find relief from superfluous hirsute adornment. Peffer whiskers are coming into style. Baldheaded men are in clover and there is much anxious demand for safety razors which will give a quick scrape with the least pain. Certainly "little old New York" does have its troubles.

FARMERS NEAR RACINE SELL LARGE FARMS TO PURCHASE SMALL TRACTS

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]

Racine, Wis., Aug. 24.—Because of the scarcity of farm labor, many farmers owning large tracts of land in this section are planning to sell this autumn and purchase smaller farms which they can operate without extra help.

It has been almost impossible for farmers to produce the necessary labor during the summer and the reduction of the number of acres farmed by each seemed to be the only solution.

One auctioneer has already arranged to make forty-six sales this autumn.

Most Powerful Talisman.

In Rev. James Ridley's "Tales of the Genii" one of the characters is Abudah, a rich merchant of Bagdad, who is haunted every night by a horrible man. Seeking in a dream the talisman of Oromanes, which insures earthly happiness, he finds it in love of God and submission to the divine will. With this talisman he is enabled to keep the hag locked up and so free himself from his nightly torment.

Washing and Automobiling.

A speaker before the convention of the National Educational association in New York asserted that if the men had to do the washing for a week there would be more washing machines than automobiles bought. This would also be quite as true if the women who do the washing had anything to say on the subject.—Washington Herald.

TROUBLESOME YOUTH AND PAL, SAME AGE AGAIN IN TROUBLE

Starts "West" With Nine Year Old Chicago Youth Visiting Here—Stole Horse, Rig and Gun.

Little Jimmy Stocks is in trouble again. Implicated with him this time is a Chicago lad named Howard Morton, nine years old, the same age as Jimmy. The latter will be remembered as the lad who handed out fountain pens to about everybody who walked in the vicinity of the postoffice one night in early spring. Later investigation showed that James had taken a parcel post consignment from the postoffice wagon.

Jimmy was found late yesterday afternoon with a .28 caliber Colt, nineteen ears of sweet corn, a loaf of bread, a box of matches and a box of small candles, a package of Camels and Art Metzinger's old white horse and the meat market delivery cart. He stole the young naval gun from the American express office at the Northwestern depot, the Camels and matches from the Janesville wholesale grocery, the horse and rig from Metzinger's barn and had "just found" the bread and corn and candles.

It was about 1 o'clock when one of Metzinger's men went to the barn and found the horse and cart missing. He thought another from the shop had taken it and returned. About three o'clock three of them began to compare notes and finding that all believed that the other one was using the rig they realized that it must have been stolen. They called the police station and a search started.

A call about 5 o'clock from the hitch barn said that the rig had been seen on Highland avenue and a short while later another call said that Jimmy had "hitched" there. The police went over and got Jimmy and later they apprehended Harold.

They admitted going to Metzinger's barn and hitching up the horse and starting away. Although he would not admit it the police believe the boys were "going west." Jimmy's big Colt, the sweet corn, matches and bread and smokes seem to indicate that James had prepared his larder for a journey.

His father, James S. Stocks, West Bluff street, can do little with him. He has hung around the hitch barn until late hours at night and on several occasions patient search has finally discovered him asleep on a pile of hay in a corner. About a week ago his mother brought him to the police station as a warning after he had done wrong. She had quite a time capturing him after he escaped. He went to the river bank and for quite a period paddled around under the Fourth avenue bridge in a boat at the frantic parent unavailing pleaded from the shore.

The Morton lad was found at the home of Mrs. Delis Dulin, 451 North Chatham street where he has been visiting.

Camon came into Janesville on the train off the Mineral Point division. As he was getting off he was jostled but thought nothing of the matter in the crowd. PORTO RICO INCOME T... SHOWS NATIVES HAVE ENORMOUS INCOMES

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

San Juan, Porto Rico, Aug. 24.—One man in Porto Rico has an income in excess of $100,000 last year, according to income tax returns just announced by the tax bureau of the Insular Treasury. This was the largest single income the tax department discovered and it is almost twice as large as the largest individual income reported to the same authorities the year before, when there was but one income above $50,000 taxed.

Of the largest individual incomes recorded for 1915 there are twenty in excess of $50,000, and of these twenty, fourteen range between $50,000 and $75,000; five between $75,000 and $100,000 and one above $100,000. Sixty-six individuals are assessed on personal incomes ranging between $20,000 and $50,000.

In all there are 957 individuals and 131 corporations taxed on income. The total amounts to $120,000, as compared with $77,000 for the previous year.

High prices for sugar have been responsible for most of the biggest incomes, officials say, and still larger incomes and more individuals having incomes large enough to be taxed are predicted for the current year.

Make Home Attractive.

There is no panacea that will cure the yearning for city life evidenced by the country boys and girls of today, but there are certain conditions which, if established, will add materially to the attractiveness of life in the country, and should therefore prevent them from flocking to the cities merely to avoid life on the farm.

Toothbrush Case.

Art ticking is very appropriate for making toothbrush cases. They should be lined with gum tissue and finished with seam binding around the edge, with loops to hang by. Always place the bristle end inside to protect from dust germs.

An Easy Mark.

Lessing, the celebrated German poet, was remarkable for a frequent absence of mind. Having missed money at different times, without being able to discover who took it, he determined to put the honesty of his servants to the test and left a handful of gold on the table. "Of course, you counted it?" said one of his friends. "Counted it!" said Lessing, rather embarrassed; "no, I forgot that."

Wifely Whimsies.

"Married life," says a woman's page writer, "would be infinitely happier if married men would obey the whims of their wives with half the alacrity they displayed when their wives were their sweethearts." Why not make allowance for the fact that a bachelor isn't eternally worn out humoring his sweetheart's whimsical idea that there's a burglar in the house and hunting for him with a flashlight?—Louisville Courier-Journal.

CLEANLINESS FIRST TO AVERT SPREAD OF BABY PARALYSIS

Not Only Home But Surrounding Community Should Be Cleaned Up Unless Scourge Is to Spread.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]

Madison, Wis., Aug. 24.—To avoid a plague like the New York epidemic of infantile paralysis, it is absolutely essential that the citizens of Wisconsin institute the most thorough clean-up efforts in the state's history. General cleanliness, not only in the home but in the surroundings of the home and throughout the community as a whole must prevail absolutely.

It is shown in the city of New York that household pets in the plague-infected district are dying eight times as rapidly as are the household pets in non-infected districts. Careful laboratory examination of these dead animals does not show that the conditions producing death in household pets have any relation to infantile parlysis in the human family. It may be that death of household pets in infected districts is due to the fact that every particle of garbage and foodstuffs on which dogs and cats frequently live is immediately disposed of, and therefore the element of starvation enters into the conditions affecting such household pets.

It is certain, however, that these household pets can act as mechanical carriers of the disease, and therefore children should not be allowed to have such animals in districts infected with infantile paralysis.

It is equally important, also, that every effort should be made to prevent dust, either by frequent daily sprinkling of the streets, alleys and lawns, or by the oiling of streets. Flies and other forms of insect life should be exterminated as completely as possible, as these pests also may act a smechanical carriers, if not playing a factor in the indirect transmission of the disease.

These are conclusions reached as a result of the conference of state health officials from all but four of the states of the Union with the federal health officials at Washington, and reported by Dr. C. A. Harper, state health officer, as being absolutely essential in putting a check to this dreadful disease.

Much concern is felt by the state health authoities who attended the conference over the possibility of an outbreak of the disease in epidemic form in the various states next year, if not this year. They are on edge over the likelihood of the disease obtaining a foothold in the territory under their respective jurisdiction, and are therefore outlining a sanitary program of far greater scope and more rigid enforcement than any heretofore designed. This means that garbage and various waste material from the household should be disposed of immediately either by being burned, buried, or enclosed in covered receptacles. It means, also, that ditches or pools of stagnant water must be clained out by filling or proper drainage installation. Dairy and horse barns should be kept scrupulously clean, and all refuse immediately covered or transmitted to places of safety.

It was the concensus of opinion at the conference that children under sixteen years of age should be forbidden to attend public gatherings of every kind, including fairs, picnics, parties, and places of public amusement, for the time being, at least. Baby contests, which are frequently held in the autumn, should be absolutely prohibited. Parents are advised to keep the children in the open air, but away from dusty places, flies and insects.

Individuals afflicted with poliomyelitis should be treated in hospitals when posible. In New York City, according to the statement of the health commissioner, Dr. Haven Emerson, 30,000 children are housed in hospitals for conditions other than infantile paralysis. Of the nearly 7,000 cases of infantile paralysis in that city, not a single case has appeared in the 30,000 children having hospital care, showing that it is absolutely certain that the hygienic conditions, general cleanliness, etc., about the hospitals are factors which prevent the transmission of this disease. The some condition is true of the state of Pennsylvania.

It is believed that schools in Wisconsin may be opened on scheduled time this year, unless the disease takes on a serious aspect in certain localities. Should it do so, the infected districts should carefully consider the advisability of opening the schools in their respective localities and provide for the daily health supervision of the pupils, so that conditions are rendered safe.

It is authoritatively shown that the adult population undoubtedly furnish a very important means of transmitting the disease, not being afflicted with it, but acting as carriers. Physicians and sanitary officials, therefore, are urgently requested to take the utmost precautions against transmitting poliomyelitis. Suitable garments to protect their clothing from the infection of the home should be worn by physicians, nurses and sanitary officials upon every visit to the home.

This is the season of county fairs throughout Wisconsin, and the sanitary side of their administration should receive more specific attention than ever. Special care should be given to the proper construction and cleanliness of toilets, looking to the banishing of fly-breeding agencies, protection of eating houses and foodstuffs from flies and dust, and adherence to every sanitary hygienic precaution.

The proper feeding of children is an important factor in rendering them less susceptible to this disease. Plain, wholesome food in moderate quantities should be taken. The greatest care should be exercised in avoiding the so-called knicknacks in the feeding of children, so as to eliminate, so far as posible, digestive disturbances. A slight attack of indigestion in a person who may have been exposed to this disease lowers the resistance of the individual and thereby renders him more susceptible to an acute invasion of the infection.

Good Example.

Aunt Polly was milking in the cow lot, and her politically excited son found her there. "Maw, you're a Democrat, ain't you?" he asked. She made no answer, but he persisted: "Say, maw, ain't you a good Democrat?" Finally she said, emphatically: "I hain't nothin'. I'm a woman milkin' a cow. You go in the house and shut up!"

A want ad will do the business.

Community Picnic at Tobacco City Yesterday Draws Hundreds of People.

Edgerton, Wis., Aug. 24.—Never in the history of this city has there been such a crowd as attended the community picnic that was held here yesterday. Fully 5,000 people enjoyed the hospitality of the Credit association. The crowds were orderly and every one seeking a good time. The rest room provided for the ladies in the Doty building had nearly 500 visitors during the day. The room was fitted out with easy chairs, Will Bardeen furnished a phonograph, and the visiting ladies were made comfortable. At the driving park a large tent was provided for a rest room, and at noon, coffee, milk, ice tea and lemonade were furnished free of charge during the dinner hour. A feature of the day was the promptness in which the games and sports were conducted, everything going on in scheduled time. There was not a dull moment during the entire day. The concert given by the Edgerton band during the day was favorably commented on by the visitors. In the evening a free dance was given on the pavement on Main and Fulton streets, the band urnishing the music. It is difficult to estimate the number of dancers but the dancing space was thronged to its capacity. Everyone danced, old and young, and the band boys were heartil yaplauded. The first event in the morning was the clay bird shoot between a picked five from Hillsdale and an equal number from Busseyville. One hundred and twenty-five birds were shot, Hillsdale winning by breaking 98 birds, Busseyville being a close second with 91. In the 25 bird shoot, H. E. Peters won the umbrella given by Ratzlaff Bros., with a score of 24.

Next was the ball game between Hardware and Newville. The batteries were: Newville, Brown and Hallett; Hardware, Buck and Connors. The game went seven innings and resulted in a score of 5 to 2 in favor of Hardware. Both teams played good ball. Immediately after dinner the sports were held in front of the grand stand on the race track. The three-legged race for boys resulted in Harvey Ide and Albert Steindle being first; Nordal Gunnes and Rollin Gettle, second, and Lester Jacobson and Thorval Gunnes, third.

In the 50-yard dash for boys, Rollin Gettle was first, Nordal Gunnes second and Harvey Ide third.

The peanut race for girls resulted in Mildred Harrison first, Hazel Goedy second and Lucille Rossebo third.

The pie-eating contest resulted in Leon Jensen, first; Herman Bartz, second and Oscar Stankey, third.

In the potato race for girls, Mildred Harrison was first; Charlotte Cunningham, 2d, and Elizabeth Doerr, third.

There were twenty-five entered in the spike-driving contest for ladies and resulted in Miss Eva Fritzke winning with seven strikes; Miss Mary Churchill, second, with eight strikes; and Nora Pederson, third, with eleven strikes.

The tug-of-war between the strong men from Porter and the strong men from Albion Prairie resulted in a victory for the Porter team.

The hundred yard dash, free-for-all, was won by V. A. Read; Otto Maves, second; and Daniel Pierce, third.

There were four teams entered in the fat man's 200 yard relay race. The team composed of Martin, Kaulman, Ellingson and Swift were first and the team composed of Langworthy, Arthur, Oberdick and Maas was second.

Then followed one of the best ball games ever staged in this city between Fort Atkinson and Beaver Dam, and resulted in a score of 2 to 1 in favor of Beaver Dam. Fort Atkinson were the first to score in the first half of the first inning, Beaver Dam scoring in the last half of the third inning and also in the eighth inning. Both teams played ball every minute of the game and it was an exceptionally good ball game.

Undoubtedly this picnic will be an annual event and the members of the Credit association are to be complemented on their efforts to show every one a good time. Special credit is due Fred Jensen, secretary of the association, as it was through his efforts that the picnic was held.

INTERESTING DATA SECURED BY BUSINESS ASSOCIATION

[GAZETTE BUREAU]

Edgerton, Aug. 24.—The data accumulated by the Edgerton Credit association presents some interesting figures. With an average radius of eight and one-half miles from the city of Edgerton there are approximately 6,500 acres of tobacco now under cultivation. There are 1,500 farming units with 16,210 head of cattle (excluding steers) and 9,871 milch cows. There are in the territory mentioned 349 silos now in use and others building.

The probable value of the cows now being milked in this vicinity approximates $500,000.00, while at the current rates for tobacco the crop hereabouts would bring the growers just a little over $1,000,000.00. The estimated value of the milk produced per month approaches $115,000.00 or exceeds $1,300,000.00 per annum.

The excess of cattle over milch cows indicates that the dairy business is growing and that it may well come to pass in the near future that the city of Edgerton may spell "cow" in addition to "cush."

NEWS NOTES from MOVIELAND

by DAISY DEAN

Over in Kansas they have a method of determining the proper length of a film kiss. It isn't a question of "kiss-as-kiss-can," but a very definite matter of film footage. The Kansas state appeal board, which handles appeals of producing companies from the decisions of the state censor, judges the kisses, and is composed of the governor of the state, the attorney general and the secretary of state.

Here is a sliding scale which governs the osculatory exercises of mascutine screen stars:

First sweetheart or stolen kiss, commanly known as the "grab-it-and-run" variety, three feet; second sweetheart kiss, fifteen feet; after marriage of one year, twenty-five feet; after five years, six feet; after twenty years, no limit at all; mother-in-law kiss, five-sixteenths of a foot; soul kiss, no limit determined upon, the board stil considering the question.

For feminine screen kissers:

New hat kisses bestowed on woman friend, six feet; rich uncle kiss, twenty feet; poor uncle kiss, one foot; vampire kiss, status not determined; kissing own baby, no limit; kissing husband, five feet for affection; for other purposes, depend on circumstances.

STARS ARE BUSY POSING

It would seem that movie stars, when not working before the studio cameras, spend most of their time posing for portrait photographers, getting new pictures for the newspapers and magazines. Clara Kimball Young, during the last three months, is reported to have posed for eleven New York photographers for a total of 365 pictures. Out of all these proofs submitted only 120 were said to have been passed by the critical eye of Miss Young and her publicity staff.

LILLIAN WALKER IN NEWSPAPER PICTURE

We recently had Anita Stewart in a newspaper story and now comes Lillian Walker in another, entitled "The Kid." It is scheduled for release Aug. 28. The Kid is a waif who has been fathered by a star reporter, gets a position on his paper and is assigned to ferret out the cause of the sudden rise in recent prices. Shadowing the cattle king, she has him arrested for conspiracy and for the murder of his wife. She learns just before his arrest that he is her father, but leaves him to return to her foster father.

PREACHER WOULD USE THE MOVIES

"I believe the Apostle Paul would have turned a crank in a moving picture show if he believed he could gain men," Rev. Dr. John A. Marquis, moderator of the general assembly of the Presbyterian church, told the evangelist rally in Philadelphia. "Any decent and honorable method to attract men to church is justified," he said. Then asked: "Why not moving pictures?"

John Barrymore.

Like other members of the famous Barrymore family of actors, he may often be seen on the screen. But he first won recognition on Broadway.

AT THE BEVERLY TONIGHT.

Anita Stewart As a Reporter.

The Beverly theatre is showing the Vitagraph blue ribbon feature, "The Daring of Diana," tonight. This picture is a vivid tale of newspaper life, Diana being a reporter on one of the biggest sheets in New York city.

Thrills are many as Anita Stewart in the title role, receives her different assignments which gradually lead into the plot itself. In one scene we find Diana roaming about the streets trying to find some news for her paper.

Suddenly the clanging fire engines appear and the crowds hurry after them, Diana in their midst.

This was no "fake"—the engines are really going to a fire and so are the crowds. In fact, the crowd was so intent on getting where the excitement was that they failed to look at the camera which was traveling through the streets in a moving automobile.

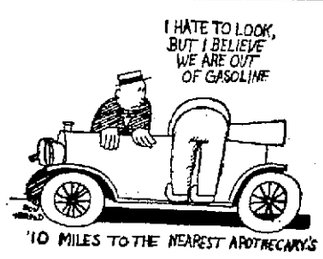

AT THE BEVERLY, FRIDAY.

Alice Brady in "Miss Petticoats."

"Miss Petticoats," from the book by Dwight Tilton, has been adapted to the screen by Harley Knoles, who also directed the play, and supported by a company of genuine players of merit. Alice Brady plays the leading role in a manner altogether pleasing and charming, at the same time giving the characters such a great impersonation as to make even her closest admirers gaze on in wonder. The many scenes requiring a sea or mill scene were filmed in the requisite locale, the old fishing schooner, the Chas. W. Morgan of New Bedford, Mass., as well as the Wumsutta Mills being utilized in the production of this World film feature which will be shown on the screen at the Beverly theatre on Friday.

Everyday Wisdom

By DON HEROLD

GASOLINE

Gasoline is a liquid which may be put snugly under the front seat of a motor car with the aid of a funnel and a five dollar bill, and which will animate the motor car several feet without further replenishing, everything else being favorable. At one time it was sold by grocers and was used mainly for cleaning white gloves and encouraging aviation among kitchen stoves; to-day it is sold to the nouveau-poor by multi-millionaires at little red fountains along the roadside—at rates that make champagne look as cheap as rain.

Gasoline will lift a man out of the deep, dusty channels that wind among skyscrapers and place him bodily among green fields and clean brooks. This is meant to sound poetic, but it can be interpreted literally by those who like their laugh better than their sob, i.e., many a man has trifled with gasoline and found himself, a few seconds later, sitting in the middle of a wet brook, several miles away, after the fashion of colored Sunday supplements.

Double header to-day. The next essay will be about birds.

BIRDS

Birds know best. (This is pretty far from gasoline.) Here is the world and here are people and here are birds. And birds seem to know. They are up at four o'clock in the morning saying what they know. All day they declare their ideas from the tree-tops. And all day, we (the people part of it) go to college and get an A.B., or this fragment of the alphabet or that, and try to find out as much as birds know, and somehow we can't. We stick our heads into prodigious volumes of fine text and soon have to wear specs, trying to get some information and it isn't there.

The information seems to be in the tree-tops—but not down here.

MAKING ONE'S WAY IN LIFE

Every Man Is the Architect of His Own Success, However He May Be Assisted.

How many of us pass our time in waiting for life to give us something instead of trying to find it for ourselves! We even go so far as to think that life owes us always more than we receive, that we fulfill our mission on earth by simply living a harmless existence and that fame and fortune should be ours by right. It is for this latter reason that we so often resent the good fortune of others and allow ourselves to believe that we have been discriminated against by Providence. We do not seem to realize that it is well worth our while to do something more than wait for what may or may not come to pass, that we are the architects in large measure of our own success and that we must make the best of what is before us in order to learn the rights to fulfill the desires of our hearts. If we make but little headway we are quick with our excuses and are always ready to place the blame upon others who can in no way be held responsible. If, on the other hand, we do succeed, it seems quite natural to take the credit ourselves whether we deserve it or not. The chances are, however, that if we amount to very much in this world the credit belongs to us more than to anyone else, even though we do receive assistance at times from those who take an interest in us. The point of the matter is that we must fortify ourselves to meet conditions as they come and to do our best to shape them into happiness and prosperity for ourselves.

HEART AND HOME PROBLEMS

By MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Letters may be addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in care of the Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) We are two chums of seventeen years and are considered very good looking, but are troubled with styes. Can you suggest a rem-

(2) Are we too young to go with boys?

(3) My sister is to be married this fall. She has red hair and fair complexion. What color wedding dress should she wear?

(4) We are going to a picnic quite a way from home. Should I have a chaperon?

(5) Is 12 o'clock too late for us to be out?

(6) I went with a boy last summer for almost a year. He was a very nice young man, and the only fault I could find with him was his queer actions. The young folks all made fun of him. I wanted to quit him but could find no excuse. There was a bunch of young people going to a picnic. They were all going to drive and he wanted to go in his machine. I wanted to go in the buggy and he would not. I thought he wanted to act contrary, so I quit him. He called up twice after that to go with me, but I refused. Did I do right? Do you think he cared for me?

(7) I met a boy some time ago at a party and have been with him twice since. I like him better than any boy I have ever been with, but don't think he cares for me. He hasn't any steady girl. How can I win his affection? BROWN AND FUZZY.

(1) An application for styes is made from four grains of white vaseline and five centigrams each of white precipitate and oil of birch. This is applied at night. A drop of belladonna or a lump of sugar is an old-fashioned remedy that is taken when symptoms of a stye are first manifested. At the same time the lids are to be bathed in warm elderflower water.

(2) Some girls at seventeen start to go with boys, but not all. If your parents approve I suppose it will be all right for you to go with them.

(3) White.

(4) You should have a chaperon.

(5) Yes.

(6) As long as you did not like the boy it was best to find an excuse not to go with him. He liked you or he would not have wanted your company.

(7) If you try to force his love you will not succeed in getting it, and you will lose his friendship. Let things take their natural course.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Sometime ago there was a letter in your column from a daughter who didn't think her home was pleasant after her mother came to live with her. I have a mother living with me and I will tell you what she does. She makes it her business to hunt up my husband's clothes and keep them brushed and pressed, she puts them away nicely, mends his socks, sews buttons on his clothes, keeps his ties in good condition, and in fact keeps everything in apple pie order. If she hears him say he likes anything, the very next meal she has it for him. She is an excellent cook.

He has often told me that he thinks more of my mother than he did of his own. If she goes away for a while he says he doesn't know how he will get along until she gets back. He pays her well for all this, but she loves to do it because she knows it more than pleases him. The money she cares nothing about, but she accepts it graciously. On Christmas or his birthday she never fails to give him something nice.

I felt sorry for this mother when I read the letter from her daughter, and the thought that I might help her has been haunting me ever since. I simply had to write.

SINCERELY YOURS.

The way your mother has solved the mother-in-law problem will be a help to many other mothers-in-law, I am sure. It is a great thing to be loved and wanted and the experiment is worth trying. Thank you so much for your helpful suggestion.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: What will remove a wart? WARTY.

Nitric acid applied with a little cotton on the end of a toothpick will remove a wart.

Household Hints

HOW TO CLEAN A PINK PLUME.

Make a solution of lukewarm water, one-half teaspoon borax and a few drops of aqua ammonia. Rub plums and rub thoroughly between hands through this until clean. Then rinse through several waters (lukewarm). To restore pink color, clip a few petals from a red rose and add to last water; let plume lay in water until desired shade, then squeeze through hands and shake over a hot stove until dry and fluffy, being careful not to use an oil or gas stove without a cover over flames, or the feather will be ruined.

SALAD DRESSING.

As salad dressing plays such an important part in the success of a salad, it is only right that we should be familiar with the different kinds of dressings and know them by their proper names, also what mixture of ingredients they are best suited for.

The typical dressings are: French, mayonnaise and a boiled or cooked dressing. Mayonnaise and French dressings are never cooked. Everything that goes into either of these is cold, and olive oil is the important factor.

Mayonnaise—Yolk of one egg, one-half level teaspoon mustard, one-half level teaspoon salt and pepper, two tablespoons vinegar, three-fourths cup olive oil. Beat yolk of egg, add mustard, vinegar; beat and add two tablespoons oil; beat until it disappears, then two tablespoons more and repeat process. To be used with meat, fish or fowl; also vegetables.

French Dressing — Three tablespoons oil, one tablespoon vinegar, one-half tablespoon salt, one-fourth tablespoon pepper (white). Add salt and pepper to oil, add vinegar slowly and beat well. To be used with the plainer vegetable salads, such as tomato, cucumber, cabbage and lettuce. Also used for marinating cooked salad materials, such as meat and fish, which are allowed to stand some time in French dressing that they may absorb a part.

Cooked Dressing—Yolks of two eggs, one tablespoon sugar, one teaspoon mustard; two and one-half tablespoons flour, one teaspoon salt, one-half cup vinegar, one tablespoon butter, cream to thin. Beat eggs, add dry ingredients, stir in vinegar, cook, then add butter and cream. Boiled dressing is a substitute for mayonnaise.

Fruit Dressing—Yolks of two eggs, one tablespoon sugar, one tablespoon flour, juice two lemons, one-half cup maple syrup or brown sugar syrup. Thin with whipped cream, beat eggs, add dry ingredients, stir in syrup, add lemon juice last; cook; add whipped cream when cold. Good for all kinds of fruit salad.

Peach Shortcake—Two cups pastry flour, three teaspoons baking powder, one teaspoon sugar, one-half teaspoon salt. Sift all together, then add three tablespoons butter worked in fine. Divide in two parts and pat gently into round cake tin, making room to place quartered peaches or berries on top, add sugar and butter. This makes two cakes and serves six people generously. Bake in quick oven twenty-five minutes.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

For Baby's Napkins—The following is something indispensable in an "oriole basket" for baby: Use a piece of material to match the upholstering of the cart—a light tan corduroy. From this material cut a cushion cover the exact size of the footrest. Next cut lining for same from white oilcloth. Then sew corduroy cover up in the usual manner, leaving the top edge open and sewing on three snap fasteners. Proceed to sew the lining up in the same manner, omitting the fasteners, and sewing one edge of oilcloth to one side of corduroy at top. Now put "ties" at each corner of this finished cover, tying it firmly in the footrest.

Use this to keep diapers in when taking baby out, and any soiled ones are put in the oilcloth "pocket." Put the clean ones between "pocket" and outside cover.

THE TABLE.

Emergency Stew—One can corned beef broken in small pieces; one medium sized onion cut up fine. Cover with two quarts of cold water, add four small potatoes cut in quarter-inch slices, and salt and pepper to taste. Cook until potatoes are soft, then add one one tablespoon butter. It is very good and will cook in twenty minutes.

Buns That Are Good for sick persons or anyone else because they are light and fluffy when done—Two handfuls of sponge or bread dough, one-half cup lard. Stir sugar and lard together well before putting other ingredients in; add one-fourth tea spoon sale, cup warm water, flour to make stiff loaf; let rise, make into buns. When light bake quickly.

Cherry Olives—Take large, firm cherries, wash and dry them (do not stone or stem them), pack in glass jars. Pour over a mixture of one tablespoon salt to one pint white wine vinegar, and seal. Use everything cold. Let stand a month or more before using, then they are like large olives and delicious.

THE GALL OF SOME PEOPLE

The deer, the horse, the rhinoceros and about one in each thousand human beings have no gall-sac and are glad of it. Most of us harbor in our economy a complete collection of useless relics, to wit, from one to four wisdom teeth, a tonsil or two, one more or less damaged appendix and one antique gall-sac in a doubtful state of preservation. The whole assortment of antediluvian structures appears to have one function only—to make life just one operation after another. And in this they co-operate with almost conscious malevolence. Blind abscesses about the roots of the third molars frequently cause chronic cholecystitis (gall-sac inflammation); diseased tonsils are a well-recognized source of vocal infection, and enlarged tonsils in children have much to do with the eruption and regularity of the teeth. Gall-stones it might be said without exaggeration, are frequently produced by neglected teeth and diseased gums.

The gall-sac is an off-shoot from the bile canal which conveys the bile or gall from the liver into the duodenum or small bowel some three inches below the lower end of the stomach. It holds about an ounce of bile, and probably delivers that much per hour, just as a perfume atomizer works, by squirting the stored fluid down the duct. The bile duct enters the bowel wall at an acute angle and its outlet is protected by a valve, so that by no possibility can fluid or oil be forced back from the stomach or bowel into the gall-sac. Experimentally it has been proved that the pressure of fluid will burst the duodenum before any fluid can be forced back into the bile duct—yet some people tell you that olive oil, plain or carefully disguised, will "dissolve" gallstones or help their passage from the gall-sac.

In health the bile is golden yellow or greenish. If vomiting is produced repeatedly from any cause whatever, more or less bile is normally squeezed back into the stomach and will be ejected. "Bile on the stomach" or "bilious attack," the amateur doctor will at once decide. But really the absence of bile in the ejected material would be more significant of "liver trouble" in a case of repeated vomiting.

Most cases of gall-sac trouble and gallstones are not accompanied with jaundice, or, if jaundice occasionally does occur it is probably only a faint icteric or yellowish tint of the skin and the "whites" of the eyes, which might be unnoticed. Such discoloration is more frequently noted in conditions which have nothing to do with the liver or bile apparatus; a yellowish or sallow complexion is common in anemia, hypothyroidism, Bright's disease and carbon dioxide poisoning (too much indoor life). When real jaundice occurs the skin becomes yellow, brown, like an Indian's complexion, and if gallstones be the cause the patient generally has a disposition and a yell like an Indian's.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Procrastination and Pyorrhoea.

Question—Please inform me what is the chief danger from absorption of the poisonous matter from diseased gums, and whether the system can be rid of the trouble after the teeth are extracted. What is the best tonic for anemia from Rigg's disease, or pyorrhoea? Would chroic lameness and stigness of the joints be a result of this diseease?

Answer—The chief danger is septicemia (blood-poisoning). Anemia, atrophy of the stomach, Bright's disease and arthritis deformans are frequent results of neglected pyorrhoea. The best tonic is good dentistry, and the co-operation of your doctor with your dentist. Joint disease is a usual result of this disease. By the time the teeth are extracted the secondary conditions may have progressed too far for complete restoration of function and health.

When We Are Reckless

In times of stress and excitement look out for money. If you don't, it will fly.

You spend more money unecessarily in a few days of excitement than you can save in weeks.

In times of sickness, for instance, excitement and anxiety combine to make you reckless. It seems mean to think of money at a time like that and so you forget your budget and the inevitable day of reckoning, and spend widly. And not only are lavish in your expenditures for the sickroom, but your purse strings are looser all around. You can't think of money.

Remember Your Running Mate Must Share The Burden

By and by the illness passes, the crisis of excitement is over and you go back to the routine of daily living. Then the day of reckoning comes and you find yourself poorer than you care to think. Perhaps the ex-invalid is your running mate and then he or she, in addition to the effort of taking up the daily tasks in a weakened state, has to help shoulder the burden of debt or depleted savings.

Of course, to have to think of money when someone you love is ill is one of the hardest things in the world. Poverty imposes no more cruel discipline than the necessity of weighing the need of medical attendance in the balance with one's ability to afford it. These things shouldn't be, but since they are, one must try to do the sick person justice without doing his future and yours an injustice.

How The Money Flies When We Travel

Travel is another condition under which, the inhibition of daily living being removed, we spend out of all proportion to what we need and can afford.

Vacations are also danger spots, and the excitement of the holiday season.

"It's only once a year," we say of each, and snap go the purse strings.

Daily expense accounts are invaluable at times like these. If you don't kick completely over the traces and stop keeping them they act as an automatic brake.

And yet, even as I write I am assailed by the other side of this matter.

Could There Be A Greater Luxury Than Letting Up?

If you have to watch pennies fifty weeks in the year, could you have a greater luxury in the other two than to let up on that grinding vigilance?

It sometimes seems to me that the hardest things the families who live on what people in comfortable circumstances set aside for spending money have to bear, is not the deprivations, but this eternal, narrowing, heart-sickening watching of the pennies.

If they don't do it, they get into debt.

If they do do it, they are likely to get dry rot of the soul.

Between these two fates lies an infinitely narrow path.

And if anyone in the world deserves a laural wreath it is the men and women who manage to keep in it.

DUCHESS OF MARLBOROUGH IS HELPING HOUSE ENGLAND'S MANY WORKING WOMEN

England's problem of properly housing her thousands of working women, a class enormously increased since the war's beginning, has been skilfully dealt with by the National Association for Women's Lodging Homes, an organization wherein the American Duchess of Marlborough is an energetic worker. The great influx into industry of women in England, and especially munitions work, has brought a demand for housing that could not be adequately met without the association's aid.

Training a Husband

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

Marian Astonishes Morris With a Firm Declaration of Her Rights and the Children's.

When Marian Southy entered her husband's study he motioned her to a chair to indicate that the interview he had requested was to be long and of a most serious nature. She sank down by the window and looked at him in the half light of the summer twilight waiting for him to begin.

"I asked you to come here, Marian, because I feel that you owe me an apology," he said with slow impressiveness.

"An apology!" she repeated in astonishment.

"Yes; I know the weather has been hot and you are tired but that cannot excuse your manner toward me this afternoon, nor your interference with my discipline of Frank." He looked at her steadily to see if she realized the gravity of the situation. As she did not reply, he continued: "You have been a very dutiful wife, and as this is your first offense I am willing to overlook it, provided you see that I cannot permit a recurrence of it."

"Morris," Marian leaned forward to get a good look at the face in the dakening room, "I am glad you have forced me to speak. I have long been trying to gather courage to tell you the things that are in my heart." She stopped and put her hand to her throat as if she were choking. "As long as I alone was wronged——"

"Wronged?" exploded Morris, turning sharply toward her.

"Yes, wronged. Listen to what I have to tell you. I remember reading somewhere that a young wife finding a certain thing irritated her husband marked the subject that had caused the friction with a danger signal as something to be avoided. It said that at most marriage was a careful steering away from danger shoals if the marriage was a success. It seems to me that is all I have been doing, all these years, charting my course to avoid trouble, and it has become so tortuous that I can no longer navigate." Morris was staring at her with his jaw dropped. "I cannot be myself, I feel bound and imprisoned, gasping for breath. But I doubt if I should have said anything if I alone had been concerned, so strong are the chains of habit, but I cannot see my children grow up in the same prison. I owe it to them to try and get freedom for us all."

Morris did not answer. A great fear filled his brain that his wife had gone crazy.

"It is the heat and overwork," was the panicky explanation, but he had no idea what was the best course to pursue with the stricken woman.

"In my home," continued the quiet voice, "there was such freedom to live our lives. We were not hushed and repressed from morning till night. The air was not full of nervous irritability whose lightning stroke any chance word might call on an unoffending head."

"Marian," her husband wet his dry lips before he could go further, "you are tired and we will not talk about this any more tonight. The heat has affected you."

A bitter laugh came from the darkened corner. "I know what you think, but I am signing a new declaration of independence for myself and children forever." She rose and threw herself on her knees on the floor beside him. "Morris, I have worked very hard to make you happy, and have hidden my own feelings till you thought I never had any. I have made you selfish by yielding to your every whim, and I have done wrong. You must learn to consider the rights of others, the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. Our children cannot grow up under constant repression and be developed properly." It was so dark that Marian could not see her husband's face, but she could feel his body growing tense and rigid as she leaned against him. She reached out one hand for his, but there was no answering presure when she slid hers into it. After a long silence he said in a voice that she had never heard:

"Leave me, Marian; I must think." With a heart like dead in her bosom Marian rose and stole softly from the room.

The parents of the young Prince, Grand Prince and Princess Yi, and his brother, Prince Yi, the former Emperor of Korea, are all anxious to see the young prince at least engaged, if not married in the next year or two. How to Judge a Woman by Her Hair

There are always the well-known and semi-humorous methods, such as saying brunettes are quick tempered. But there is real common sense in just noticing whether the hair is well kept to judge a woman's neatness. If you are one of the few who try to make the most of your hair, remember that it is not advisable to wash the hair with any cleanser made for all purposes, but always use some good preparation made expressly for shampooing. You can enjoy the very best by getting some canthrox from your druggist and dissolving a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water when your shampoo is all ready. After its use the hair dries rapidly with uniform color. Dandruff, excess oil and dirt are dissolved and entirely disappear. Your hair will be so fluffy that it will look much heavier than it is. Its lustre and softness will also delight you, while the stimulated scalp gains the health which insures hair growth.

Anita Stewart Says

BEAUTY VS. COSMETICS

Perhaps just as many people write asking me about cosmetics and their use as they do about how to get into the motion pictures. While there is no law against the use of rouge and its comrades, it is hardly the best way to improve one's beauty.

Professional people who find it necessary to use rouge, theatrical powders and other cosmetics in their work realize better than any others what an enemy these preparations are to the health of the skin.

Beauty in all her glory stands condemning this artifical beautifying fad which is stealing the natural, healthy glow from the faces of young girls all over the country.

"But," you say, "if a woman is deathly pale, surly there is no harm in her making herself more attractive." Here you are taking it for granted that cosmetics will make the woman more attractive. Nine times out of ten, I should judge, the users of preparations are easily recognized, and the moment their secret becomes known their attractiveness takes quick flight.

Why, do you know, if I am forced to leave my make-up on through the day and into the night when we are working overtime on a big picture, my skin seems to become rough and to feel anything but pleasant. Then how I love to take my jar of cold cream and a huge piece of cheesecloth and rub all that grease out of my skin. Sometimes while it remains on I can't feel fresh and clean.

Perhaps some of you are so very skillful in this matter that these additions to the complexion may not be noticed. If so, I must bow before you, for as long as I have used cosmetics in my work they are always easily detected.

Oh, dear friends, in the city and in the country, do try to realize that your beauty is your naturalness. For nothing that isn't natural can be beautiful.

My work has made plain to me things which others do not learn until much later in life. Beauty is a happy circumstance which comes to some. Others are endowed with another grace in order that the law of average may be spared. If we are the ones with the other endowment let us take it as our sword and go forth to the battle with the world confident in our weapon, and with it win.

GINGLES' JINGLES

BACK ON THE FARM.

We have manicured the fields of grain, we've milked a bunch of cows, to the shocks while pitching bundles we have made a million bows; we have beat it through the stubble with our bare feet scratched and sore, we have bumped the hard heads with our joes—bumped them until we'd roar. We have seen the rain and sunshine, seen it all back on the farm, but we cannot say it hurt us, that it did us any harm; neither can we say we liked it, the appeal was cold and gray, it was hustle every minute 'till we beat it for the hay. And it seemed as though we'd hardly loose ourself to pleasant dreams, 'till a wild array of noises, shouts, hurrahs combined with screams, would assemble us for action, bring us back to earth once more, duty calls, "right shoulder pitch forks," would be shrieked within our door. And that 4 a. m. old rooster, with his tenament near ours, for a bird was sure some yodler in the dawns' small early hours; but 'mid noises that disturbed us let him warble in the dawn, be the early bird and yodle—we should worry now, we're gone.

"Nothing Equal to It"

That's the verdict. Your grocer can sell you the same identical Holland Rusk, now made in Holland, Mich., by the same famed Dutch Bakers. Be sure the Windmill is on the package. There are other Rusks—base imitations—but none so good as the original Holland Rusk.

Crispy, tender, brown slices deliciously flavored with fresh eggs, sweet milk and rich creamy butter. A splendid lunch for children, with butter and sugar; better for them than bread or pastry.

Look for the Windmill on the package. Get the genuine and you will like them.

DOINGS OF THE VAN LOONS—The "Appreciation" Was Hardly a Lasting One

BY F. LEIPZIGER

The Auction Block

By REX BEACH

Copyright by Harper & Brothers

They got into the cab and drove away without exciting suspicion. Merkle alighted two blocks up the avenue and sped to his own house; Bob turned his jaded nag westward through the sunken road that led toward the Elegancia and Lorelei.

The owner of the equipage was waiting patiently, and there still lacked something of the allotted hour when the exchanged garments had been transferred to their respective owners. Bob walked toward the Elegancia with a feeling of extreme fatigue in his limbs, for the effort to conquer his intoxication had left him weak; he dimly realized also that he was still far from sober.

There was no answer when he rang at Lilas Lynn's apartment; the hallboy volunteered the information that the occupant had just gone out with a gentleman. Miss Knight? Yes, she was upstairs, he supposed. Bob was surprised at his wife's apparent self-control when she let him in. Except for the slim hand pressed to her bosom and the anxiety luring in her deep blue eyes, she might have just come from the theater. Those eyes, he noted, were very dark, almost black, under this emotional stress; they questioned him, mutely.

"We got him home all right," he told her, when they stood facing each other in the tiny living room.

"Will he live?"

"Oh, yes. He says he's not badly hurt, and Merkle agrees. Lord! We'd never left him alone if we'd thought—"

"I'm glad. When you rang I thought—it was the police."

"There, there!" he said, comfortingly, seeing her tremble. "I won't let anybody hurt you. I was terribly drunk—things are swimming yet—but all the way across town I couldn't think of anything, anybody except you and what it would mean to you if it got out."

"It will get out, I'm sure. Such things always do."

He eyed her gravely, kindly, with an expression she had never seen upon his face.

"Then—we'll face it together," he said.

After a moment her glance drooped, a faint color tinged her cheeks. "I—wouldn't dare face it alone. I couldn't, but you're tired—sick." He nodded. "You must lie down and sleep, and get to be yourself again— We can't tell what may happen now at any moment."

"It's the reaction, I suppose. I'm all in. And you?"

She shook her head. "I couldn't sleep if I tried. I feel as if I'd never be able to sleep again. I—I'll sit and watch and—wait."

CHAPTER XVI.

That afternoon Mrs. Knight, in a great flutter of excitement, arrived with Jim at the Elegancia. Embracing her daughter in tremulous, almost tearful delight, she burst forth:

"You dear! You darling! Jim came home not an hour ago and told me everything. I thought I should swoon."

"Told you — everything?" Lorelei flashed a glance at her brother, who made a quick sign of reassurance.

What with Lorelei's good fortune and Lilas' catastrophe Mrs. Knight was well-nigh delirious. She was still rejoicing garrulously when Lorelei burst into one of her rare passions of weeping and buried her face in her hands.

"Child alive!" cried her astonished mother. "What ails you?"

Instantly Jim's suspicions caught fire.

"Say! Has Bob welched?" he demanded, harshly.

The amber head shook in negation.

"Isn't he—nice to you?" quavered Mrs. Knight.

"Yes. But—I'm sorry I did it. He was drinking; he didn't know what he was doing—"

"Hush!" Mrs. Knight cast a fearful glance over her shoulder. "It was all straight and aboveboard, and he knew perfectly well what he was about. Jim would swear to it."

Lorelei lifted a tragic, tear-stained face. "I ought to be hanged," she said.

Jim laughed with relief. "There's gratitude for you! If I had your share

"Don't Weaken," He Cautioned Her.

of the Wharton coin I'd let 'em hang me—for a while."

As mother and son were leaving, Jim managed to get a word in private with his sister.

"Don't weaken," he cautioned her. "Lynn's gone, and it's all over. We've got the whip-hand on all of 'em—Hammon, Merkle, Bob, Lilas—everybody. We've got 'em all, understand? We've landed big!"

When she was alone Lorelei gave a sigh of relief, which changed to a sob as the sense of her helplessness surged over her again. She had deliberately sold herself; she wearily wondered where the new road led—surely not to happiness.

Toward evening Adoree Demorest telephoned, and with many anticipatory exclamations of pleasure invited Lorelei to dine.

"I can't," answered Lorelei, faintly.

"Bother your engagements!" Miss Demorest's disappointment was keen.

"I can't even explain, unless—you'll come here."

"To dinner?"

Lorelei decided swiftly. She dreaded to be alone with Bob; her constraint in his presence was painful, and he also, before going out, had appeared very ill at ease. He had not even made plans for the evening meal. In view of all this she answered:

"Yes, to dinner. Please, please come."

Lorelei was not quite sure that Bob would consent to dine in the modest little home, but under the circumstances idleness was maddening, so she fell to work. This was very different from what she had expected, but—everything was different. Once the marriage had become known to Bob's people and he had thoroughly sobered down, once she had withdrawn from the cast of the Revue, their real life would begin.

Bob was pale and a bit unsteady when he arrived, but Lorelei saw that he suffered only from the effects of his previous debauch. He was extremely self-conscious and uneasy in her presence, though he kissed her with a brave show of confidence.

"I galloped into the bank just as they slammed the doors," he explained, "but my bookkeeping is rotten."

"Are you trying to tell me that you have overdrawn?"

"Exactly. But I drew against the old gentleman, as usual, so on with the dance. What's the—er—idea of the apron?"

"It's nearly dinner time."

Bob's eyes opened with surprise. "Why, we're going to Delmonico's."

"I'd—rather do this if you don't mind." She eyed him appealingly. "I don't feel equal to going out tonight. I'm—afraid."

His glance brightened with admiration. "Well, you look stunning in that get-up, and I'd hate to see you change it. Do you mean to say you can cook?"

"Not well, but I can fry almost anything. Mother has a maid. I couldn't afford two."

"I love fried things," he assured her, with a twinkle. "And to think you're going to cook for me! That's an experience for both of us. Let's have some fried roast beef and fried corn on the cob with fried salad and cheese."

"Don't tease," she begged, uncertainly. "I hardly know what I'm doing, and I thought this would keep me busy until theater time."

He extended a hand timidly and patted her arm, saying with unexpected gentleness:

"Please don't worry. It was a terrible night for all of us. When I think of it I'm sure it must have been a dream. I saw Merkle. He got back to Hammon's house ahead of the doctor, and nobody suspects the truth. But the Street is in chaos, and all of Hammon's companies are feeling the strain."

"Shouldn't you have been at business on such a day?"

Bob shrugged carelessly. "I'm only a 'joke' broker. The governor thinks a firm name looks well on my cards. I hope he doesn't lose more than a million in this flurry—it won't improve his disposition. But—wait till he learns I've married a girl who can fry things— By the way—" Bob paused. "I invited a friend to dine with us tonight."

Lorelei was less dismayed than he had expected. "So have I," she said.

"I thought it might be pleasanter for you," he explained, a bit awkwardly, "inasmuch as we're not very well—acquainted. I saw before I went out that you were—er—embarrassed—and—and—" He flushed boyishly, scarcely conscious of the delicacy that had prompted his action. "Anyhow, he's gone home to put on a clean sweater."

"You don't mean you asked—?"

"Campbell Pope: yes. I met him, and he looked hungry. He's coming here at six." For almost the first time in Bob's society Lorelei laughed out clearly.

"And I asked Adoree Demorest," she said.

Bob grinned and then laughed with her. "Fine!" he cried. "Both members of this club. Really, this ought to make the best finish fight seen in New York for many a day."

Adoree's surprise at finding Robert Wharton in her friend's apartment was intense, and when she learned the truth she was for once in her life speechless. She could only stare from one to the other, wavering between consternation and delight. Finally she sat down limply.

"I—I'd have brought a present if I'd known," she managed to say.

"Are you going to wish us luck?" Bob inquired.

"Luck! You've both got it. She's the best girl in the world, and you're—" Adoree hesitated, and continued to stare, round-eyed. "I didn't think you'd—I didn't think she'd—I don't know what I thought or didn't think. But—Jimminy! Married!" When Lorelei led her into the bedroom to lay off her wraps the thunderstruck young woman had more nearly recovered herself. "Why, he's worth millions," she exclaimed, in a whisper—"billions! I don't know how to talk to him—or you, for that matter. Shall I call you 'my lady' or 'your honor,' or— I didn't dress for dinner either; I suppose I should have worn the crown jools."

"You're going to wear an apron and help me scorch the dinner," Lorelei laughed.

As Lorelei explained the reasons for tonight's program, Adoree saw for the first time the weariness in her friend's eyes, the pallor of her cheeks, the tremulous droop of her lower lip. Seizing Lorelei by the shoulders, she held her off as the target for a searching gaze.

"Tell me, did they make you marry him?" she inquired, fiercely. It was plain to whom she referred.

"No."

"Whew! I'm glad to hear that. You love him, don't you?"

The answer came readily enough, and the blue eyes did not flinch, but the smile was a trifle fixed and the cheeks remained colorless.

"Why, of course. He's very nice."

"Lorelei!" Miss Demorest's fingers tightened; her voice was tragic, but she had no chance to say more, for Bob called just then from the living room:

"Hurry back, girls. There's something burning, and I can't find the emergency brake."

When Adoree finally came forth in one of Lorelei's aprons—really a fetching garment, more like a house dress than an apron—Bob told her whom they were expecting as the other guest.

She paused with a bread-knife upraised.

"That—viper?" she cried.

"Campbell isn't a viper; he's a cricket—a dramatic cricket," declared Bob.

Adoree began to undo the buttons at her back, but Bob seized her hands.

"Let go. I'll blow up if I see that creature," she exclaimed, in a kind of subdued shout.

Argument proved vain until Lorelei told her firmly: "You owe it to yourself, dear! And we won't let you go."

The dancer ceased her struggles, her brows puckered.

"Seriously, now, Lorelei has told me everything, and I want Campbell to acknowledge his mistake," said Bob. "The public has swallowed that royalty hoax, but there's no use deceiving him."

Despite her show of bravery Adoree was panic-stricken when the bell rang and Bob went to the door to explain the change of plan and invite Pope in.

"That—Viper?" She Cried.

He entered the living room with a hand extended and a smile upon his lips, then halted as if frozen. By the time he had been introduced to Adoree he had burst into a gentle perspiration.

As for Miss Demorest, she took a grim delight in his discomfort, and prepared to blast him with sarcasm, to wither him with her contempt when the moment came. Meanwhile she listened as the two men talked, turning up her nose when Pope scored Broadway with his usual bitterness.

"He thinks that's smart," she reflected; but she, too, detested the Great Trite Way, and his words expressed her own distaste so aptly that she could think of no argument sufficiently biting to confound him. She deliberately framed a stinging reference to his pose in the matter of dress, though in frankness she had to admit that he wore his gray sweater vest with an air of genuine comfort and unconsciousness.

Dinner Stories

A young woman in Pittsburgh was recently looking at material in one of that city's leading dry goods stores in an attempt to select what would make an attractive skirt for the seashore. The clerk rather strenuously suggested the availability of several patterns.

"But," said the young woman, "they are rather loud, don't you think."

Without a glimmer of a smile, and in a perfectly correct tone for a salesman to assume, he replied:

"Too loud for awnings—just right for skirts."

James T. Fields, one of the notable publishers and also a man of letters, relates that when he went to Stratford he met a native of that country. He told the native that he had come to see the home of Shakespeare.

"That's all right," said the man of Warwickshire, "but, for my part, I don't believe Shakespeare would be heard of now if he hadn't wrote them plays."

Jimmie giggled when the teacher read the story of the man who swam across the Tiber three times before breakfast.

"You do not doubt that a trained swimmer could do that, do you?"

"No, sir," answered Jimmie, "but I wonder why he did not make it four and get back to the side where his clothes were."

The doctor had listened to his patient's heart, taken his blood pressure, in short, made a thorough examination of his physical condition. Then he announced his verdict.

"What you want is to get more exercise, walk more regularly."

"Well, doctor, I don't see how I can do that," answered the man. "I'm a postman!"

Valuable Material Long Ignored.

Many years ago soap boilers used to have great difficulty in getting rid of a thick, evil-smelling liquid which was the chief by-product of their industry. They ran it into streams and sewers. Presently someone began collecting it and refining it. The result was glycerin as it is known today.

His Proper Sphere.

"What will they do with that eldest son of theirs? I heard his father say he had neither judgment nor foresight." "Then why don't they make him a weather sharp?"—Baltimore American.

WORSE THAN FACING GUNFIRE

Gallant Seaman Found Himself in Dilemma From Which He Was Extricated in Nick of Time.

A jack tar from H. M. S.—entered a southwestern London post office to change a money order.

As it was a government pay order he was asked, according to regulations, to show his certificate of identity. But the sailor had lost the certificate.

All the girls in the post office became anxious to help.

"Haven't you your name marked anywhere?" urged one. Jack thought hard, suddenly kindled with inspiration, opened his mouth to speak, and then stood silent. A flush deepened his tanned complexion.

"Well?" urged the young postal lady.

The sailor wanted that money badly. He faced the guns. "Yes," he blurted, "my name's marked on my shift."

Post office girls have no training in the technical lingo on his majesty's navy. Whatever sort of document, docket or disk this "shift" might be, it was her duty not to pay the money until she had seen it. "Then let me see your 'shift,'" she demanded amiably but firmly.

Small veins knotted on Jack's temples, a moisture stood on his brow. But desperate finance needs desperate measures. "Have you got a screen here?" he asked in a hollow voice.

"A screen!" echoed the post office girl in bewilderment. "Aye, a screen!" repeated Jack on a rising note of agony.

It was then that a colleague saved one of his majesty's A. M.'s from apoplexy by a hurried and whispered explanation to his inquisition.

Perhaps because the gods love laughter the sailor's identity was then accepted without further evidence.—London Daily Mail.

SUN'S RAYS CARESS TEMPLE

Tinge of Red Upon Mighty Columns of Baalbek May Be Explained in Two Ways.

At Baalbek man has truly achieved the cyclopean. Here the excavators have unearthed a complete set of ruins. Here lying guides get tourists to swallow bigger stories than in any place I know of, says a writer in the Christian Herald.

Here the towering columns of the temple of the sun watch the orb of day descend behind the Lebanon, after the lifting shadows have engulfed the smaller temple of Bacchus. And the sun, in departing, leaves his kiss upon the stately colonnade in a clearly seen tinge of red.

There are prosaic folk who say that this is caused by iron in the rock. That may do as an explanation to those who believe in the age of iron, but this mighty temple does not belong to the present age of machinery.

It is more likely that the red tinge in the rock is the stain of blood—the blood of men who died in erecting this everlasting monument. Perhaps it is as well that the blood of the laborers should show on the monument of the conqueror who built this temple to an unknown god.

Men who are killed in mines and dangerous occupations today have no such mighty reminders of their toll as the blush which shows on the graceful columns of Baalbek when the setting sun slowly settles behind the long line of lofty Lebanon.

Strength of a Flower.

A rock split asunder by a growing tree that has found lodgment in what was at first only a small crack is a familiar sight to most people. The force that a tree exerts in accomplishing this feat is tremendous, but relatively it is not equal to that exerted by the flower that John Burroughs describes in a recent book, "The Breath of Life."

One of the most remarkable exhibitions of plant force I ever saw was in a western city, where I observed a wild sunflower forcing its way up through the asphalt pavement; the folded and compressed leaves of the plant, like a man's fist, had pushed against the hard but flexible concrete until it bulged up and split, and let the irrepressible plant through. The force exerted must have been many pounds. I think it doubtful if the strongest man could have pushed his fist through such a resisting medium.

Life activities are a kind of explosion, and the slow, continued explosions of this growing plant rent the pavement as surely as powder would have done. It is doubtful if any cultivated plant could have overcome such odds. It required the force of the untamed, hairy plant of the plains to accomplish the feat.

All Great Men.

Once upon a time, so the story goes, a Frenchman visiting the tomb of Napoleon wrote on a convenient wall the lines:

"'Bony' was a great man, a soldier brave and true."

An Englishman, coming along a little later, read this and added:

"But Wellington did beat him at the battle of Waterloo."

The next visitor was an American who, seeing the foregoing contributions, rushed into the competition with all of the restraint that characterizes members of our great nation:

"But braver still, and truer far and tougher than shoe leather,
"Was Washington, the man who could have licked them both together."

he wrote, and doubtless went away quite satisfied with his climax.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Education.

Our public-school system is the most successful social enterprise yet undertaken by any people, and on it we spend three-quarters of a billion dollars a year. Education is indeed our foremost industry, from whatever point of view it may be regarded.

FORTY YEARS AGO

Janesville Daily Gazette, Thursday, August 24, 1876.—The special train from Milwaukee, having on board the West Ends and many friends, arrived in the city at 12.45. The Mutuals and the West Ends are having a lively time at the Mutuals' ball park this afternoon, before the largest audience ever assembled there.

The West Ends purchased round trip tickets in Milwaukee so as to avoid walking back in case of a defeat in the contest with the Mutuals.

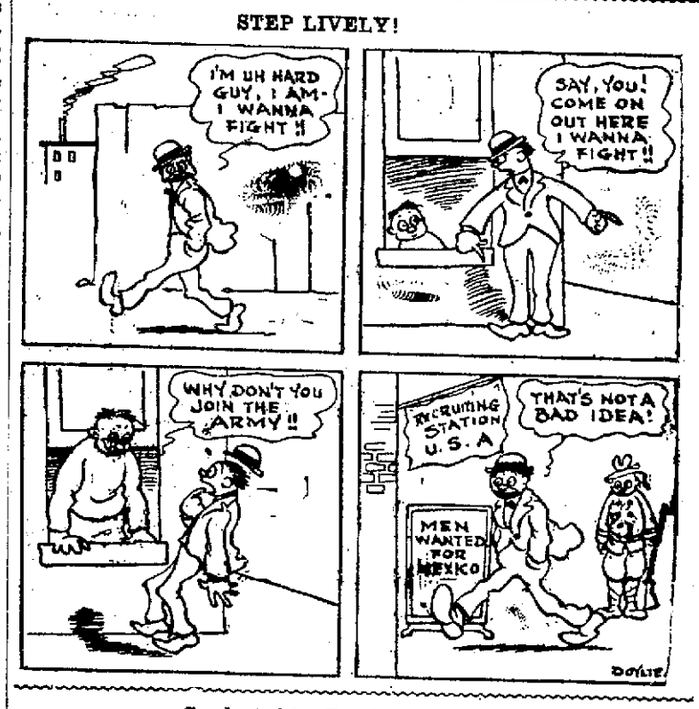

The state license of the Continental Fire Insurance Company was revoked by the secretary of state, on the eighteenth of the present month for non-compliance with the staae law.

We are informed by Mr. Shrake, who has just returned from Burr Robins' circus that Geo. K. Steele has left the circus as advance agent, and that Robbins has employed Kimball to take Steele's place. Mr. Kimball formerly held the same position for Mr. Robbins.

Last night three prisoners confined in the jail had the audacity to improve an opportunity to escape, and to-day, nothing has been heard of thir whereabouts. They used a portion of an iron bed stead, in prying apart the bar across the cell window and thus escaped. The sheriff offers a record of $50 for Williams' capture and $25 for that of Holleran. The other prisoner had nearly served his time and no reward is offered for his arrest.

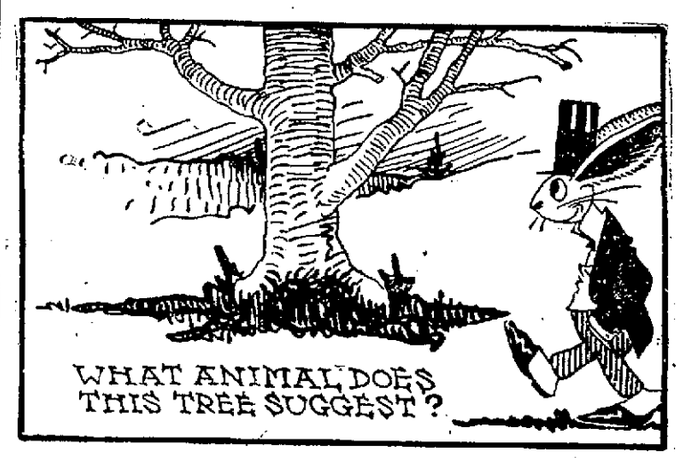

Dr. J. B. Whiting returned from Philadelphia this afternoon.

SLEEPING CARS

The best name we ever saw for a sleeping car was "Othello." A sleeping car is suffocating. If Othello had dumped a bucket of ashes into Desdemona's bed, Desdemona would have got a true, complete sleeping car sensation. It is very hard, with a lack of pulmotors, to come back to life after a night in a sleeper; the only thing to do is to go to the wash room and get your lap and shoe tops full of soapy water and be careful not to get speared by an elbow or sawed up on somebody's safety razor.

A sleeping-car berth fits like a corset and smells like a mausoleum. It is the world's nearest successful attempt to do away with the third dimension. By making a "Z" out of yourself you can fit lengthwise, and by holding your breath you can fit up-and-downwise. Sleeping-car berths are boiler plate at each end so you won't get yanked through head-first, into the next compartment, the engineers are so playful and frolicsome.

The first time one travels on a sleeper he buys himself a special costume consisting of a traveling cap or a new kimono, and it is quite an adventure. The twentieth time, it is a base and vulgar expedient, a mere way to get some place. Sleeping cars are coeducational and cosmopolitan. They are full of peering old ladies, cookie-eating babies, orange-eaters of all ages, and traveling men who are so used to it that they beat you to sleep. You can tell how experienced a person is on a sleeping car by the number of times he doesn't run up and down the aisles.

ROWLANDS GIVE GAME TO NEW YORK, 5 TO 4

Sox Unable to Hold Two Run Lead After Three Tallels Are Secured on Lone Hit.

A general blow-up in the eighth beat the Sox at New York yesterday. The score was 5 to 4. They had shoved across three runs on a scant single hit in the fifth and another in the eighth but the upheaval was general and the Yanks won again.

Rex Russell opened and continued until the eighth when Red Faber was called to the rescue. At that time the sacks were loaded and Russell had sent one man home after filling the bases. Mogridge began pitching against the Rowlands but gave way to a pinch-hitter in the fifth and Fisher finished. Along with Fournier's catch in the Sox out in the eighth when they came to bat, more poor base running let the game slip through their grasp. Weaver and Lapp were the worst offenders yesterday, their boners staving off two runs, one of which would have tied the count and the other, enough to win.

SENATORS SPLIT TWO WITH BROWNS

St. Louis Wins Second, 5 to 4, But Washington Cops First, 4 to 2.

Washington broke even with St. Louis in a double-header, winning the second game, a seven inning affair, 4 to 2, after losing the first game in ten innings, 4 to 5.

Although Washington knocked Koob out of the box in the first game, St. Louis succeeded in tieing things up again and while Davenport held the Senators safe, the Browns scored on Shaw in the tenth.

Plank went well for five innings in the second game, then lost effectiveness and Washington batted out a victory. Darkness ended the game.

DODGERS DOWNED BY TINKER'S CREW

Heavy Batting Wins For Cubs in Game Yesterday With Leaders.

The Cubs won yesterday from the Brooklyn Dodgers, 7 to 6. All their runs came in on healthy wallops off Dell and Cheney in the first four innings. Appleton found the Tinks soft for the rest of the contest while the Dodgers, with two runs to their credit, piled up two singles and two doubles off Lavendar in the seventh for three tallies. One more was made off Packard, in the ninth.

GRAND AMERICAN TRAP-SHOOTING HANDICAP AT ST. LOUIS TODAY

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

St. Louis, Aug. 24.—The Grand American Handicap, the feature event of the international trap-shooting contests being held on the public trap-shooting grounds here, will be shot off today. State champions from virtually every state are entered for the event, which will be the sixteenth in the history of the association. Tomorrow the consolation handicap will be shot. No contestant ever has won the Grand American Handicap twice.

Bobby Reynolds, manager of Gene Delmont, has matched his protege for two bouts to be fought within a week. On Labor day Gene will battle ten rounds with Battling Schultz at Evansville, Ind., at 128 pounds, and on Sept. 8 Delmont will meet Young Goldie in Pitsburgh.

MORRIS MILLER

Won't somebody please have a law pased stopping the idiotic practice of tacking the nicknames of diamond celebrities to others who happen to have the same surname? Every Dolan must be called Cozy, every Young has to be referred to as Cy and every Weaver simply can't be anything but Buck. Now we have Elmer Myers, the promising young right-hander of the Athletics, dubbed Chief by some pinhead, although the name bears no relevancy at all with the man. Elber isn't an Indian like John Tortes Myers of the Robins. He is a Pennsylvania paleface, but that doesn't stop fatheads from calling him "Chief." There is a point, as a rule, to nicknames of ball players, and it is entirely lost when it is wished on another. Perhaps some day an athlete named Raymond will be honor man at Harvard. He decides to enter major league baseball before practicing his profession of chemical engineering. He won't be in baseball two days before he will be called "Buggs" by weaklings who think they have said something brilliant.

The position of the Brooklyn public on the question of Sunday baseball admits of no doubt. Thousands upon thousands have signed the petition blanks at Ebbets Field and when the move begins in Albany next winter to get a bill through the legislature the law makers will be compelled to lend an attentive ear to the appeal, writes Len Wooster in the Brooklyn Times. It is the working league ball on the Sabbath. They cannot see the Dodgers in competition with their rivals of the National league even on Saturdays in many cases. This called forth a remark from a prominent union man that the backers of the scheme for Sunday baseball would do well to enlist the support of organized labor. There are 500,000 union men in Greater New York.

Fielder Jones believes that pitching is the biggest factor in winning a pennant. After that he rates speed, hitting and fielding. Jones insists that a pitcher make a batter hit his best ball and keep his less deceiving deliveries away from the plate. For instance, if a pitcher has a good curve, but his fast one does not amount to much, in working a batter he must cut the curve over the plate and waste the fast ball. This is the system the White Sox hurlers worked in 1908. The present Browns are using it now, and it is bringing results.

One Saturday afternoon during the spring training season the Giants' second team dropped a game to the Waco club of the Texas league. It was said later that the reason for the defeat was that the youngsters had overeaten at luncheon. This was borne out by one of the "bushers."

"We did eat too much," he said, "but there was a reason. We had breakfast at 8:30 and didn't get anything more to eat until nearly 2 o'clock. We sure were hungry."

"Doo you mean to say that you had to go without food for nearly five hours?" he was asked.

"Yes, we did," he answered vehemently.

TINKER SELLS TOM SEATON BUT HAS STRING ATTACHED

Chicago, Aug. 24.—Tom Seaton, Cub pitcher, goes to the minors, but Joe Tinker has attached a string to him. Seaton left last night for Indianapolis, where he hopes to be a big aid in winning the American association pennant. Tom's work hasn't been up to the standard. Should he win back his old form, Tinker has the right to recall him.

Fast Horses To Be Seen At the Wisconsin State Fair

No. 1—Don Densmore, 2:02¼.
No. 2—Sayde Densmore, 2:02.

There are always horses who remain favorites with state fair racing patrons as long as their turf career holds out. This is especially true in Wisconsin in the case of the Densmore family—father and daughter—who will take part in the big harness program at the Wisconsin state fair, Sept. 11 to 16. Incidentally, Sayde Densmore has already paced the fastest mile—2:07¾—made by any five-year-old this year.

It is not often that a stallion who is still busily employed earning dividends for his owner on the race track is also credited with a world's champion, but the old Wisconsin campaigner, Don Densmore, 2:02¼, who has taken part in more stirring pacing races in Wisconsin than any other pacer, overrode past precedents in 1915, thus giving striking evidence of his merit as both a race horse and a sire. His four-year-old daughter, Sayde Densmore, raced in sensational fashion throughout the season and finally at Lexington, Ky., crowned herself queen of the four-year-old fillies by pacing to a record of 2:02. The best previous record was 2:05¾, held jointly by The Maid and Stellar Advice, Sayde therefore lowered the mark no less than three and three-quarters seconds. It was truly a great performance, but to those most familiar with the filly's capability it came as no surprise.

Sayde was practically among the unknowns until she flashed at Davenport, Ia., upon the opening of the Great Western circuit. Of course, her breeder and owner, D. A. Dinnie, of Minot, N. D., and her trainer, Henry Thomas, were aware of her speed and extraordinary ability to carry it; but to outsiders she was an unappraised factor. In her three-year-old form she made but one start, that being in a special at Fargo, N. D. The race was won by Don Conamore, a son of Don Densmore, the filly taking the second heat in 2:24¾, and Don the third in the same time. Moreover, her status was confused by her being erroneously entered in the 1914 Year Book as a trotter. At Davenport she met a field of fourteen in the $1,500 2:20 stake, winning the first heat in 2:05¾, and thus equaling the existing record. She was interfered with in the second heat, finishing third, but took the final and the race in 2:07½. Previous to this race she had won a special up in Dakota where there was no real competition.

It was straight heats for her at Peoria, Ill., best time 2:08¾, and at Burlington, Ia., she showed her facility for half-mile track racing by winning a $1,500 event and pacing the second heat in 2:08¾. At Galesburg the freakish conditions of the race placed her fourth, but she finished 2-5-2. Dubuque found her again first in the summary, best time 2:06¾, and the race worth $1,500. At Milwaukee she was an easy victor in the 2:25 pace. She next engaged in a six-heat contest at Sedalia, Mo., winning the first and second heat in all the others. Desiring to key her up for a record and not running the risk of getting her out of her class, Messrs. Dinnie and Thomas elected to start her in the 2:04 event at Lexington, and there she finished 5-4 to Earl, Jr., in 2:01½, 2:03¾, being unplaced for the first and only time, but pacing her first heat, accurately timed, in 2:03¾. Then followed her record breaking mile, after she retired for the season, having made a campaign and set a record which will take a long time for four-year-olds to equal or excel.

Sayde Densmore is almost a perfect racing machine, being equally at home either in front or trailing, and without a single fault of manners. Her speed is terrific (in her record mile she went to the half in :59¾), and her ability to carry it unquestioned. So the best Wisconsin judges select her as being morally certain to prove the world's first 2:00 pacing mare.

Don Densmore made his turf debut in 1910, winning that season seven races and taking a record of 2:12¼. His campaign of 1911 was the best ever credited to a western pacer, for he won thirteen out of fourteen races, took a record of 2:08¼, and won $8,990. He reduced his record to 2:02½ in 1912, and has raced six consecutive seasons, mostly in Wisconsin, winning thirty-four races and earning over $34,000 in stakes and purses. He is a horse of iron, with wonderful underpinning, a sturdy powerful individual throughout, and a very handsome one as well. His breeding is in keeping with his merits as a race horse and sire, he being by Pactolus 2:12¾, a truly remarkable progenitor, and his dam, Nina Densmore 2:17, by Hamdallah, also produced Densmore 2:10, Miss Densmore 2:10¾.

Don is also the sire of Don Conamore, 4, 2:18¼; Don B., 4, 2:15¾, and the fast green youngsters, D. A. Densmore, 2; Margaret Densmore, 3, and Miss Densmore.

WHAT'S A MERE 103 IN THE TEXAS SHADE TO MILITIAMEN?

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Tokyo, Aug. 24.—American militiamen drilling on the Mexican border in terrific heat may cool off when they hear that 2000 Japanese soldiers marched and maneuvered for 12 days in Formosa and the Percadores with the mercury mounted as high as 120 degrees Fahrenheit. And only three cases of sunstroke were reported during the entire period.

The first nine days were spent in constant marching, the troops covering 100 miles. Because of the heat, the soldiers were permitted to wear any clothing they pleased. Some wore helmets, some straw hats, some a knitted undershirt or a thin kimona.

The maneuvers were deliberately held in the intense heat, in order to give the experts a chance to study the best way to handle men under such conditions.

ENFORCE SANITATION IN SUMMER RESORTS

Inspection Board Gives Much Time in Inspecting Summer Resorts on Sanitation.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Aug. 24.—Summer resort sanitation occupied much of the time of the state hotel inspectors this season. The great majority of camps and resorts in this state have been inspected, neglected conditions surveyed and improvements ordered where warranted. Out of 365 hotels and restaurants inspections last month, 69 orders were issued.

Special attention is given at these resorts to toilet conditions, with the object of rendering them sanitary and removing them from the list of disease causes. Proper sewerage facilities, approved garbage disposal, screening of all doors and windows, eradication of all fly-breeding conditions, and purity of water supply are objects sought by inspections. Nearly all of the "summer typhoid" is ascribed to flies and polluted water supplies.

Under the law an accumulation of decaying garbage constitutes a nuisance, as does an unclean toilet. These are the common nuisances of summer resorts.

"They must be abolished if real good is to be derived from a summer outing," says the state health board's bulletin on summer resort sanitation. "It is just as much in violation of the law to create a nuisance at a resort ground by improper disposal of garbage and sewage or by maintaining unclean outdoor closets as it is in a residence or business district of a city."

Local boards of health are asked to assist in enforcing these regulations.

ATLANTIC STATES WARNED TO WATCH FOR ARMY WORM

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]

Washington, Aug. 24.—Warning to watch for the army worm has been issued by the Department of Agriculture to people in the Atlantic states. An unusual abundance of the moth of the true army worm in Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia indicated the possibility of an impending outbreak of this destructive pest.

The moths, the entomologists of the Department report, were laying their eggs during the first week of July, and as it takes from three to four weeks for the caterpillars to mature, their presence should begin to be quite apparent this month.

Farmers should be on the alert, the Department says, to discover this pest in its younger stages, before it has reached a large size and has committed irreparable damage to growing crops, especially grasses and grains.
